PACIFIC COAST MEN IN 52D AMMUNITION TRAIN TRAIN LUCKY IN WAR

Lost Only One Man And Were In Some Of Hardest Fighting, Too.

New York, Jan. 23.—The 52d ammunition train, "Luckiest ammunition train on the fighting front" arrived here today on board the transport Orizaba. The 52d is made up of Pacific coast men and was trained at Fort McArthur.

"The 52d was the luckiest ammunition train on the fighting front," declared Sergeant Harold Hanson, of Los Angeles. "Although there was some fierce fighting, we lost only one man. He was a dispatch rider who has been reported missing. I guess he went on to Berlin."

"We are mighty glad to get home," said Alvin Nelson, Los Angeles. "Tell the folks that the 52d did its work well and the boys are back safe."

Among the members of the 52d were Dave Dorfman, Portland, Or; Major J. Bertalero, Lead City, S. D.; John P. Pappadopoulos, San Francisco and Sergeant Fred Buraworth, Los Angeles.

After two months training the train went into action and saw fighting at the Argonne and on the Meuse. It was sent overseas on June 8.

The Orizaba carried 2526 American troops. It arrived from Brest. Among those on board were 380 sick and wounded men.

Units on Board The units on board the Orizaba were: Fifty second ammunition train complete, 18 officers and 549 enlisted men; signal corps casual company number 1 (Maryland), six officers and 146 enlisted men; chemical warfare service casual company number 4 (New York) four officers and 159 men; casual company number 218, (marines), casual company 78 (New Jersey); casual company 423 (New York).

The wounded men aboard paid a high tribute to the excellent work being done by base hospital number 20 at Royat, France. This unit was organized and sent to the front by Californians.

Among the officers on board were: Lieutenant Sam D. Cornell, Seattle, Wash.; Lieutenant Harry I. Borden, Los Angeles; Lieutenant Joseph P. Baker, San Francisco and Sergeant C. E. Cathbert, a well known moving picture director of Los Angeles.

Sergeant Major R. McKay and Sergeant Major F. O. Gerard, of Los Angeles, were in the hottest of the early American drive and carried marks to show it.

First Lieutenant Landon H. Spooner, of Portland, Or; Lieutenant N. P. Connell, Seattle and Lieutenant Clarence Collins, Albany, Or., were other officers of the 52d ammunition train aboard.

Purser On S. S. Queen Shoots Marine Fireman On His Boat San Francisco, Jan. 23.—Frank H. Pooley, of Tacoma, purser on the steamer Queen, today shot and killed James Truman, a marine fireman. The shooting occurred in Pooley's office on board the Queen.

Pooley and Truman had had trouble before over wages which Truman said were due him. Pooley asserted when arrested that Truman tried several times to strike him.

Truman was shot through the heart. Pooley, a man of nervous disposition, suffered an almost complete breakdown when arrested.

As Pooley stood on the wharf watching the stevedores loading freight Truman came up. He had been drinking, according to Pooley. He demanded his back pay. Pooley says he told Truman to come aboard and get it.

Pooley says Truman became abusive, calling him vile names. "He backed me into the office," said Pooley, "and tried to strike me."

The Queen was being made ready to sail at 1 p. m. for Seattle and Tacoma. This meant "homecoming" for Pooley, for his wife lives in Tacoma.

Officials of the Pacific Steamship company, owners of the Queen, will help defend Pooley. He has been a purser for the company since its organization.
