Little tucks are used to finish the edges of this jersey frock which is of a soft shade of brown called dual. Little tucks, also, are the only trimming on the severe chemise of fine lawn. A big leather covered buckle of tan fastens the bodice at the side.

"No More Sleepless Nights"—Bathes Internally

Mr. J. B. Barrows, 271 West North St., Decatur, Ill., writes Tyrrell's Hygienic Institute of New York, as follows:

"I am still using the 'J. B. L. Cascade' once a week, and find it most efficient for keeping me in fine condition. It acts as a sedative for tired nerves and has been a great help for sleeplessness. I have frequently arisen from bed and used it in the middle of the night with satisfactory results."

The reason for this remarkable result is because the functions cannot work properly when there is accumulation of waste in the lower intestine.

The "J. B. L. Cascade," by the simple process of properly applying warm water, eliminates all this waste and causes the functions to work smoothly and properly.

Over half a million intelligent Americans are now using the Cascade with similar results.

It is the invention of Chas. A. Tyrrell, M. D., of New York, a noted specialist on internal bathing for 25 years.

It will be shown and explained to you by Daniel J. Fry, wholesale druggist and mfg. pharmacist, Salem, Ore., who will be glad to give you an interesting booklet by Dr. Tyrrell called "Why Man of Today is Only 50 per cent Efficient." This booklet is free upon request. Ask for it today, while you think of it.

Christmas package all right and have worn the chamois skin vest every day. The candy and gum are all gone. Of course we can get those things here but its nothing like the kind from home.

"I hardly believe I can get out of the army until the end of my enlistment. Have you received my allotment yet? I would hate sure to lose it as it amounts to a great deal."

Corporal Kar Hedrick, son of Mrs. Jennie Woolery of 344 South 25th street, writes from the Rhine river in Germany as follows:

"The Rhine valley is full of smelters and factories and is really a wonderful manufacturing center. The factory chimneys are so thick they look like a forest of big trees. If Germany hadn't stopped when they did, we would have made them look like a lot of stumps.

"We are living in hotels and villas. Seems odd to be walking over heavy plush carpets and polished hard wood floors and to sleep in deep feather beds. The merchants here have not felt the war much as they look prosperous. German paper money is decreasing in value every day.

"Some think we will have to go to Berlin yet to get this thing under martial law. But we hope to soon get back to Brest, France, and get a transport for the good old U. S. A. We have high hopes of being in America by April 1 but of course we can never tell."

Sergeant Priddy Writes

From a letter written by Sergeant Foster E. Priddy, now with the American army of occupation in Germany, the following extracts will be read with interest, as he saw some of the hard fighting on several fronts. He says:

"The 9th infantry with which I was connected, spent about ten days on a quiet sector on the Lorraine front. Then we went into camp near Toul until the St. Mihiel drive was pulled off. It seemed a good many things on this drive, being my first time over the top. We had very little resistance and the whole thing was like a big maneuver. From there we went up on the Champagne, north of Chalons, being brigaded with the French under Gen. Gouraud. Here we went over the top twice, got the Hun on the run and gained our objectives. From Champagne we went over on the Meuse-Argonne front where we made our last big push before the enemy capitulated. I was in the lines when the last shot was fired, and believe me we were a happy bunch when it was all over. I went through it all without getting a single scratch or being sick a day."

"Perhaps you know the 2d division is included in the army of occupation. We left Beaumont, France, on Nov. 27th on our long hike to the Rhine. Altogether it was about two hundred miles, and we did it all in heavy marching order, up hill and down, in rain or shine. We are now located in Bessdorf on the left bank of the Rhine, about six kilometers down the river from Coblenz. It is a town of about 6000. My company is located in a school house, with stoves and electric lights. We are getting good 'chow' now and that helps more than anything else."

"The manners and customs of this country are very different from France. It was interesting to note the difference as we marched along. The liberated Belgians gave us the warmest welcome. The Luxemburgers and Germans were a little suspicious at first. We are getting along all right with them now."

"Yours truly,
"Sergeant Foster E. Priddy."

for several months, writes to T. G. Chestnut, of route 3, from a French port recently, saying in part:

"So far we have been kicked from pillar to post, traveling from one part of France to another, helping in the process of cleaning up the remains. This is no small job. Our present location is Lourdes, a small town in the southern part of France. I find the climate here almost identical with that of Oregon—rains alternating with sunshine, but no cold weather whatever. At present there is no indication that we will be returned to the states soon, but hope it will be by spring or early summer. I believe we are more needed at home than in the army. Have been in excellent health so far, except for a siege of influenza, which has raised havoc in the army."

C. M. Lockwood has recently received word from his son, Adair, who has been connected with one of the big transoceanic liners between New York and France, stating that he has just passed the rigid examination in the electrical service and has been advanced to the position of first class radio electrician and is in charge of all radio equipment on the vessel. He has made several trips across the Atlantic since entering the service a year ago, and has had some thrilling experiences. Once a submarine came to the surface too close to the vessel to fire a torpedo. The convoy guns were trained upon it instantly but it managed to submerge before it could be blown up. Adair is hoping that he will be transferred to the Pacific coast to finish up his four year term of service.
