SUPREME COURT HANDS DOWN TWELVE DECREES

Mrs. Springer Loses Suit Wherein She Charged She Was Held As Insane.

In an opinion handed down by the supreme court this morning, T. G. Bligh wins in his suit against the heirs of J. W. Maloney and Judge Percy R. Kelly is affirmed. In July of 1914 Mr. Bligh sold to Mr. Maloney a moving picture theater at Albany. The price was $1000 cash and $2500 to be paid in $500 installments semi-annually.

Another opinion handed down this morning by the supreme court is of some local interest as it involves the question of damages to a woman for being confined a few months in the insane asylum. The suit is that of Winnie J. Springer of Portland against the officials of the Oregon state hospital and primarily against Dr. Curtis Holcomb who gave Mrs. Springer an examination for insanity before making his official report.

The House of Representatives this morning resolved itself into a debating society, whereby most of the members had an opportunity to speak on social evils and the double moral standard.

House Bill 355, fathered by the training department of war activities was the cause of the morning's debate. It is this bill that tightens the reins on disorderly houses and gives officers of the law more authority in enforcing the law.

Schuebel started the ball rolling when he declared "I cannot see where any decent man should oppose this law. It is in the interest of society. If it is necessary to protect men during war times, it is equally as necessary to put safeguards around them after the war."

Gallagher was opposed to the bill saying that the money spent in prosecutions might well be used in advancing the work of the Oregon Social Hygiene society. He wanted plenty of punishment for the man who had broken on the moral law and one that would punish the man and not the woman alone.

Mrs. Alexander Thompson, of The Dalles, the only woman representative in the house, expressed her opinion on the bill as follows: "In the interest of real morality I oppose the bill. It deals with results and not the cause. It discriminates against the woman. I note that it is the name of the woman who is always published where there is an infraction of the law and not the name of the man. Oregon's high moral standard is due to education and is the work of the Oregon Social Hygiene society."

The opposition of so many members of the house to the proposed bill somewhat riled Mr. Schuebel, who was vigorously supporting it. "I'd like to be the prosecuting attorney and go after some of these representatives who talk so finely about morality," he declared. "I hope this legislature will not go on record against this bill because some of its members want to break the law."

But the general feeling was that the proposed bill was defective and for that reason there was 36 votes cast against it. Most of the members took the opportunity of the roll call to state they favored a moral law but that they did not favor the bill proposed.

SOCIAL EVILS BILL NOT SATISFACTORY

House, After Discussing Proposed Law, Decided It Did Not Meet Needs.

The House of Representatives this morning resolved itself into a debating society, whereby most of the members had an opportunity to speak on social evils and the double moral standard.

House Bill 355, fathered by the training department of war activities was the cause of the morning's debate. It is this bill that tightens the reins on disorderly houses and gives officers of the law more authority in enforcing the law.

Schuebel started the ball rolling when he declared "I cannot see where any decent man should oppose this law. It is in the interest of society. If it is necessary to protect men during war times, it is equally as necessary to put safeguards around them after the war."

Gallagher was opposed to the bill saying that the money spent in prosecutions might well be used in advancing the work of the Oregon Social Hygiene society. He wanted plenty of punishment for the man who had broken on the moral law and one that would punish the man and not the woman alone.

Mrs. Alexander Thompson, of The Dalles, the only woman representative in the house, expressed her opinion on the bill as follows: "In the interest of real morality I oppose the bill. It deals with results and not the cause. It discriminates against the woman. I note that it is the name of the woman who is always published where there is an infraction of the law and not the name of the man. Oregon's high moral standard is due to education and is the work of the Oregon Social Hygiene society."

The opposition of so many members of the house to the proposed bill somewhat riled Mr. Schuebel, who was vigorously supporting it. "I'd like to be the prosecuting attorney and go after some of these representatives who talk so finely about morality," he declared. "I hope this legislature will not go on record against this bill because some of its members want to break the law."

But the general feeling was that the proposed bill was defective and for that reason there was 36 votes cast against it. Most of the members took the opportunity of the roll call to state they favored a moral law but that they did not favor the bill proposed.

Representative Welch voted in favor of the bill while Hughes, Looney, Martin and Speaker Seymour Jones voted against it. As the matter now stands, if those interested in such laws want any legislation, a bill will have to be presented that will meet about forty different views. As the session is about on its last lap, the chances are that no legislation will be enacted for the handling of various moral problems.

J. W. Jones Will Manage Velie Company Agency

J. W. Jones, for the past five years advertising manager of the Capital Journal, has resigned and will take up the management of the Salem Velie Company, beginning Friday of this week. Owing to the immense amount of money in the valley from crop distribution and the industries of the city, Mr. Jones feels that there is a demand for a serviceable car like the Velie. He will handle not only pleasure cars but will make a specialty of from one to four ton trucks.

Recent changes have been made in the construction of the Velie truck in the line of practical improvements which makes it of special value to the farmer. Improvements for the 1919 models are also noticeable in the Velie pleasure cars. The show and ware rooms of the Salem Velie company are located in the Klunger building, 122 North Commercial street, two doors north of the Salem Woolen Mills clothing store. The building has been re-modeled especially for the Salem Velie Company. The pleasure cars will be shown at the automobile show to be held at the armory beginning Wednesday of this week.

OREGON RETAILERS

(Continued from page one) of Portland, Everman Robbins, of Molalla, and W. W. Mill, of Portland. Needed Co-Operation. A large part of this morning's session was taken up with consideration of the president's recommendations and with the address of Captain A. A. Hall, of the Adjutant General's office in Portland. Captain Hall was before the convention with a meretricious analysis of House Bills 43 and 44, and joint resolution No. 6, designed to shut off needed appropriations for the Oregon National Guard. He pointed out emphatically that Oregon could not hope for accommodations from the federal government unless the state showed a disposition to tie up with the government in its military program. He showed that unless immediate action was taken in this matter the state would be shut off of federal appropriations to the amount of $25,000.

Captain Hall was vigorously applauded and after a few questions for explanation a motion was made and carried that the resolutions committee should be instructed to draw up a resolution, condemning the legislation in question and urging generous appropriations for the National Guard. This noon there was a raid of hungry delegations upon the plant of the Cherry City Baking Company, where a droll lynch was spread out by the management. It may be assumed that the orders will not be made to fill any more orders this week. It is stated that the sumptuousness of the repast was only equalled by the oratory of the speakers who addressed the diners. Other prominent features of the day's program was the reports of committees and the annual report of the secretary. A topic of general interest was presented by B. F. Stone, of Astoria—"What the Retailers can do to ward the development of the resources of the state."

The matter of the convention for next year was decided when the Astoria articles were taken from dead Germans or from prisoners or picked up on the various fronts. As an index of the sort of fighting the brothers went through it is stated that in one engagement Captain Wygant had nearly one half of his company wiped out and himself severely wounded. His brother was stationed at another front, and they met by sheer accident in the hospital where the captain was being cared for. Capt. Wygant was a friend of Druggist Woolpert, serving in the same company with him on the Mexican border.

Walker Spence, a well known young man of this city, is reported seriously ill at a hospital in France, where he is with the American expeditionary force. The news came in a letter to his mother from one of his soldier friends, and the family is now making every effort to secure more definite news. Walker Spence enlisted in the service in this city last July, coming from Los Angeles for that purpose.

The lecture on the subject of France and its people, which was to have been delivered tomorrow evening at the public library by Dr. Carl Gregg Doney, has been postponed at the suggestion of Mr. Doney in order to provide a date for Miss M. Brenda Francklyn, a distinguished lecturer and traveler, who is making a tour of the country in the interests of the homeless and orphaned children of France. She is an artist of note, having studios in both London and Paris. She will speak at the library on Wednesday evening on the conditions in France, and will also deliver two brief addresses on Thursday, one before the students of Willamette university in their chapel, and one before the ladies in the afternoon in the auditorium.

Lawrence Mill Workers Are Returning To Duties. Lawrence, Mass., Feb. 11.—Although there were arrests for intimidation there was no disorder among the strikers when the mills opened here today. Four women and two men were arrested near the Arlington mill. Police on duty at several of the large mills reported that the number of workers who returned to work today showed a marked increase over yesterday, due, it is believed, to the action of the loom fixers.
