City News

At the time war was declared all life insurance companies placed a war clause on new policies issued to men engaged in naval or overseas military service which required extra premium for full coverage. W. C. Dyer, district manager of the Missouri State Life Insurance company, has received word from his company that all claims will be paid in full regardless of the payment of extra premium and all such extra premiums will be refunded. Such action is a tribute to our boys.

Information was received late yesterday afternoon from the firm of Stenloff & Cross that articles of incorporation had been filed for the new packing company, which has a capitalization of $250,000. The officers of the company are: F. W. Stenloff, president; W. H. Stenloff, vice president and Curtis B. Cross, secretary-treasurer. They will be known as "The Valley Packing Company"—a name that is both brief and significant, since the new packing house now being planned is not merely a Salem institution but concerns the entire valley about the city.

Samuel Roome, in charge of the local express office, calls attention to a campaign that has been inaugurated by the national management with a view to bringing about a more careful marking and packing of express packages. In many of the larger centers regular schools have been established to instruct employes in these lines, and according to figures gathered by the management there is need of a lot of instruction on the part of the public. It is stated that the companies are paying out something like a million dollars a month in damage and loss claims, largely due to defective packing and marking.

The work of remodeling the McKinley school building so as to fit it for hospital purposes has been finally completed and the group of patients who have been occupying the emergency building on Center street were moved into the new quarters, where conditions are much more convenient and congenial. It is equipped to accommodate fifty patients, a number of private rooms being provided in addition to the wards. The basement will be utilized as surgical rooms, cooking equipment, etc.

There is again a call and an opportunity for Salem's knitting corps to get busy, the Red Cross headquarters at the post office having just received a large allotment of materials for sweaters, stockings, etc. There will be a great demand for these articles for the European refugees.

Superintendent Hall, of the Chemawa Indian school, calls attention to the fact that there is generally a mistake made with regard to the public dances at Chemawa. While such dances are given in that vicinity, they are not held at the Indian school and have nothing whatever to do with it.

While no action was taken this morning in the house of representatives as to holding over into next week, it is generally conceded that even with working evenings, the business cannot be cleaned up by Saturday afternoon. Even with the speed made this morning and limiting of orating to five minutes to each member, no great amount of business was transacted. Many members have already made up their minds that the sessions will continue into next week. With so many spell binders, the house just could not get down to the quick transaction of business during the early part of the session. The oratorical element is entirely of men with their first legislative experience. The old time such as Childs of Brownsville and Reines of Hillsboro talk but little. At this evening's session, the matter of continued sessions will of necessity be taken up as the 40 days time limit expires tonight.

The time for the services at the Scandinavian tabernacle, 15 and Mill streets, has been changed and will be held hereafter as follows: Sunday school at 10, preaching at 11 o'clock. Next Sunday Rev. Lind will give an illustrated reconstruction lecture. Over a hundred new and wonderful slides will be thrown on the canvas. The English language will be used at this service.

Mrs. M. M. Todhunter received a telegram this morning from her son, Ray Todhunter, saying he had completed the four months course in the officers training school at Harvard university, which he entered in October, and has received his commission as ensign. He enlisted in the navy in June, 1917, at Salem.

On account of the number of people who failed to see the musical comedy—"The Midnight Cabaret"—at the penitentiary last night, the affair will be repeated tonight. The proceeds are to be used for the benefit of the prison ball team, and for athletic and entertainment work generally. Those who attended the play last night speak in the highest terms of the inside talent.

W. G. Hopper, who has been stationed at Camp Lewis since last July, returned to the city last night.

OBITUARY NOTICE
Mrs. Louise McKinney passed away at her home at 1304 N. Church street in this city Wednesday, February 19th, at the age of 83 years. The funeral services were held at the Congregational church of Hubbard on Thursday, February 20th, conducted by Rev. S. C. Long of that place, and attended by a host of friends.

Mrs. McKinney had been a resident of this city for about ten years. Previous to that she had resided for 32 years at Hubbard. She is survived by one son, J. L. McKinney, and one daughter, Sarah Churchill, both residing in Salem. There are also six grand children and one great grandchild. All the relatives were in attendance upon the funeral excepting Harold McKinney, who is with the American army in France.

Business Not Quite As Active As Yesterday

Washington, Feb. 21.—The national war labor board today awarded employees of the Portland, Oregon, Railway Light and Power company a horizontal wage increase of 20 percent above the scale effective October, 1917. The award also grants the eight hour day to linemen, construction men and several other classifications.

Substation and power station employees and truck drivers were reclassified by the board and were granted a 20 percent increase over the existing scale.

LITTLE TALKS ON THRIFT
By S. W. STRAUS, President American Society for Thrift

It is estimated that the wage earners in New York State suffer a loss of 30,000,000 working days a year on account of sickness. This includes tailors of both sexes in all lines of work. At an average of $2.00 a day, there is an indicated loss of $40,000,000 a year from ill-health. Using these figures as a basis, there would be an annual national loss of one-half billion dollars. However, this apparent loss is substantially reduced by health insurance laws now in effect in thirty-eight states.

These laws are general copies of the workmen's health insurance plans that have been adopted in most European countries. Unfortunately we have been the last of the great nations of the world, to take up the problem of insuring wage earners against such losses. It is quite likely that within the near future all our states will have adopted legislation which will provide for a small portion of the wages to be deducted each week for the insurance fund in return, for which the worker will receive certain compensation during the periods of illness, and, in some states, there will be provision for maternity and funeral benefits.

Such laws, however, never will solve all the problems of ill-health nor will they mitigate the evils of health thriftlessness. Thrift of health is just as necessary a part of attention to health as large a dividend as attention to health. When nature has bestowed her choicest gift—good health—upon us, we should regard it as a heritage more precious than gold.

No form of investment pays as large a dividend as attention to health. Just a little care in our daily methods of living may add years to the period of our usefulness and may spell the difference between success and failure. Within the range of our personal acquaintance how many persons do each of us know who have been kept back in the fight for advancement because of poor health?

Regard your physical health as a bounteous bank account. Withdrawals against this account consist of late hours, improper habits, worry, over-eating, improper mastication of food, unnecessary exposure to contagious diseases, insufficient physical exercise and fresh air, over-work, nerve strain and fits of ill-temper. Against these losses we can build up our account by careful habits, wholesome diversion and occasional respites from the strain of routine work.

But there is a danger line established by nature. If our bank account is allowed to drop below this point it never can be built up again. No more new deposits will be accepted and it then will be only a matter of waiting until Death closes the account forever.

Above all forms of thrift I would say none is so necessary, none represents such a small investment of personal sacrifice with such a generous yield of happiness, prosperity, usefulness and peace as the thrift of health.
