When a senate bill providing that the salary of a deputy in the office of the county superintendent of the Marion county schools be increased from $600 to $900 a year appeared in the house, Speaker Seymour Jones was so surprised that a salary bill should come from the senate that he exclaimed: "I don't see how Alex LaFollett let that little bill get by the senate." It is a standing joke at the state house, that when an increase of salary or an appropriation appears in the senate that LaFollett is there with his ever ready hatchet.
