MANDATES AND THE MONROE DOCTRINE.

The announcement that the League of Nations will probably give the United States a "mandate" to look after Mexico brings up the interesting question of the relation of the League of Nations to the Monroe Doctrine.

The "Mandatory" plan adopted primarily for the disposition of the German colonies and the subject provinces of Turkey can easily be extended to apply to all countries needing help in their industrial development. It is pretty sure to be so applied in the case of the new nationalities arising from the ruins of Austria-Hungary and Russia. Various big world powers will be charged with the responsibility of helping these struggling nations in their political and economical evolutions.

The Monroe Doctrine which for nearly a century has guided the destinies of the New World makes the United States the natural candidate for a general mandate of this sort in the western hemisphere. The United States would not want the responsibility assumed by any foreign power, and in the present state of things, no foreign power would think of asking for it or accepting it. Our assumption of duty may be taken for granted.

It will not involve any great change. There will be little practical difference, but a big difference in viewpoint.

The Monroe Doctrine has been purely American, our own national policy, merely tolerated by the rest of the world, and long a source of suspicion and discontent on the part of the sister republics benefitting by it. In the last few years this Doctrine has been undergoing a subtle change, shading almost insensibly into the new idea of Pan-Americanism, which would make all the nations of this hemisphere jointly responsible for the good behavior of any of their number. Thus we were in a fair way to evolve an American League of Nations before the present situation arose. Such a league may yet develop, as a subsidiary of the World League.

In the meantime, the Monroe Doctrine will probably assume the form of the "Mandate" suggested, with the authority of the League of Nations submitted for the single authority of the United States, and the principles upon which it will operate harmonized by those of the world league which apply to all nations.

They will not differ in any essential respect from the same principles we have hitherto applied in giving our half-developed neighbors the help they needed. And there will be no occasion to lament or resent the passing of the term "Monroe Doctrine", when the substance of it persists and the consummation of its purpose is made easier by the new world-sanction.

RIPPLING RHYMES

OBITUARY.

There'll be much less of weeping when Barleycorn is sleeping out in the place of bones; there'll be much less of sighing, of sobbing and of crying, of hopeless tears and moans. There'll be much less of trouble when man shall blow no bubble from off a stein of beer; the world will be much sweeter when we have seen John teeter out to the boneyard drear. There'll be few gents in prison when Barleycorn's got his'n, and locks the Rum Hole door; there'll be less fine and trimming when booze has ceased its brimming in coffin varnish store. There'll be less work for coppers, there'll be less planting paupers in cheap and unmarked graves; there'll be less stipend blowing when booze has ceased its flowing in rippling rotgut waves. There'll be more pep and ardor to fill the bin and larder, and buy the children duds, when father can't go snooping where boozy boys are whooping, and blow his wage for ruds. Old Barleycorn is smitten, his doom is sealed and written, he weeps and disappears; the biggest thing recorded since Adam was awarded a span of brindled steers.

WANTED—A NEW FUEL.

There must be increased production of gasoline from available petroleum, or there must be discovered a new source of supply, says Dr. Joseph E. Pogue of the federal bureau of oil conservation. Unless something is done to improve the situation very soon, he says, motor gas may go to 60 cents a gallon.

The number of gas engines is increasing rapidly. Their uses are becoming more varied. So far, nothing in advance of the gas engine has been thought of for driving the airplanes. Yet manifestly, here is where the new discovery is most needed. In Kipling's "With the Night Mail," written over a decade ago, he takes for granted a new fuel and a new gas.

Any new invention must at first make use of the means at hand. The first automobiles were steam-driven because the uses of steam engines were understood. As the horseless car showed signs of becoming practical, a better means of driving it was found in the gas engine.

The airplane, still in infancy, makes use of the gas engine. But possibly it cannot develop to mature effectiveness without a fuel better suited to its needs than gasoline.

With increased production to take care of the demand for automobiles, and with the new fuel entirely removing the airplane demand for gasoline, there would be hope for better, swifter and more comfortable transportation.

Many minds are working on the problem of the new fuel. Who will be first to draw it from the universal storehouse?

Victor Berger, pro-German socialist, sent to prison for plotting against the government, is said to have said that "the sentence proves that the United States of America takes the place of Russia." Since Berger and his kind profess such love for the bolshevik, this Russian coloring ought to please him.

The present legislature has done a tremendous lot of business. We are judging this by the number of clerks and other employees the members have found it necessary to hire to handle the work of the session.

In Munich, it is said, every unemployed man is supported by the state. And according to latest reports the only state in Munich is a state of war.

Quite appropriately the deported bolsheviks are being shipped back to Europe in the captured German ships.

THE PROMOTER'S WIFE

BY JANE PHELPS

Bab's Mother Gives Her Good Advice
CHAPTER XV.

Neil was a man of slight artistic culture, but he took an instinctive delight in the beautiful. Anything really lovely gave him pleasure, and inversely anything ugly gave him pain, that at all times seemed almost physical.

"You like it?" he asked.

"It was our first visit to the new apartment we had rented since it had been decorated for us."

"Like it? I just love it and who wouldn't? But it is so large and I shall have to have another servant. I dread that."

"Never mind. Call her the thorn in your rose, if you like, but don't let her spoil the beauty of the rose for you." And Neil, well-groomed, alert, brimming over with good nature and satisfaction, eager and keen, drew me to him and, kissing me many times, said:

"My rose, aren't you, Bab? The setting is none too good for you."

When Neil was like this I was repaid for any carelessness, any laxness on his part. I would forget everything save that I loved him, and that he belonged to me.

Neil's very appearance was reassuring. I was overwhelmed by the optimism of prosperity, and it brushed from my mind all misgivings. I seldom allowed them room, save when something was said to cause them. But as I knew few people most of them introduced by Neil, it was rare that anything unpleasant or unsettling reached my ears.

I had made many acquaintances, but few friends. I had erred on occasions and found that a supposed friend was really an unfortunate acquaintance. In one or two cases intolerable bores. But Neil delighted in company. He loved to entertain—if we did it lavishly. He wanted that, like everything else he did, to show his worldly success. I was not surprised when he expatiated upon the size of the dining room, the capacity of the apartment, its appropriateness for entertaining.

"Come now, dear, let us go home. You look tired," I said. All suddenly I had noticed he was fagged. "Any way I am."

"Yes I am tired," he acknowledged. So we turned off the light and went home.

When we reached home he sank heavily into a chair. He looked older and worn. I noticed for the first time a nervous twitching around his mouth. For an instant I felt irritated at the thought of the way he wasted himself to add to his wealth; and so made himself too tired to tell me of his love as often as he used to.

I had received a letter from mother that day, and I now brought it to Neil to read. (A habit I had formed when we were first married.)

"Read it to me," he said.

"I told her about the new apartment, described it, and also told her how wonderfully you were getting on." I said as I unfolded the letter and commenced to read in response to his request.

"Go slow, dear," mother said, "you are both young. Neil is a very young man to make enough money to live in such luxury as you describe. You must be very proud of his ability. But remember that the sun does not always shine, and prepare for the rainy day that is almost sure to come at some time in your life. Father says to tell Neil to keep away from speculation. He says it is a rock on which many young men split, and that it is better to go slow and sure. Of course we do not know that Neil does speculate, but I guess father thought he would warn you."

"We all miss you very much, and in response to your invitation may soon make you a short visit."

There was much more, but this was all that directly related to Neil in any way.

"You don't speculate, do you Neil?" I asked as I laid the letter down.

"Of course I do! everyone does now-a-days. But not in the way your father thinks. But no big money is made without taking risks. I'll take a chance any time."

QUICK RELIEF

FROM CONSTIPATION

Get Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets

That is the joyful cry of thousands since Dr. Edwards produced Olive Tablets, the substitute for calomel.

Dr. Edwards, a practicing physician for 17 years and calomel's old-time enemy, discovered the formula for Olive Tablets while treating patients for chronic constipation and torpid livers.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets do not contain calomel, but a healing, soothing vegetable laxative.

No griping is the "byword" of these little sugar-coated, olive-colored tablets. They cause the bowels and liver to act normally. They never force them to unnatural action.

If you have a "dark brown mouth" now and then—a bad breath—a dull, tired feeling—sick headache—torpid liver and are constipated, you'll find quick, sure and only pleasant results from one or two little Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets at bedtime.

Thousands take one or two every night just to keep right. Try them. 50c and 25c per box. All druggists.

TO THE LEGISLATORS

Editor Journal: We observe that a resolution has passed the senate to increase legislators wages from $3 to $5 per day and time from 40 to 60 days. Since they are asking the people to grant this and in order to avoid prolix explanations we would ask that the present legislature pass the following resolutions at this session before adjournment, viz: that we refrain from electing presiding officers until we are temporarily organized and sworn into office; that we elect a committee on committees, whose duty it shall be to select the committees as well as the chairmen and recommend them to the main body for approval; to abolish personal clerks and stenographers; to cut down the number of employees from one-half to two-thirds their present number. Pay the employees $3 per day with just such overtime as is actually necessary; to employ no one who has any relative as a member of the main body; to make no new jobs for hungry office-seekers, nor raise salaries generally, and that we will show an inclination to economize where it can be done without injury to our institutions.—A tax-payer who talks from experience.

Your Catarrh May Lead To Consumption

Dangerous to Experiment With Treatment That Gives Only Temporary Relief.

You see everywhere people who seem to breathe only with the greatest difficulty. There is a constant hawking and spitting in an effort to clear the throat and nostrils, and what appears at first to be only a slight cold holds on with stubbornness until a fully developed case of Catarrh has the victim firmly within its grasp.

There is not the slightest doubt that all this suffering is caused by a tiny disease germ that gets into the blood and multiplies by the million. The catarrh germ attacks the delicate mucous membranes of the nose, throat and air passages.

These become choked up with the accumulations, seriously interfering with the breathing apparatus, and causing untold suffering. There is usually a cough, irritated throat, soreness of the membranes and constant discomfort.

If you have ever been afflicted with Catarrh, you know something of the suffering and inconvenience the disease causes. You know, too, that it cannot be cured by the application of sprays, lotions, ointments, jellies, or other local treatment. Even if such treatment does succeed in opening the stopped-up passages for a while, they soon become clogged again, and there is no progress made toward a cure of the disease.

In addition to the suffering and inconvenience caused by Catarrh, there is always danger that the disease will gradually go lower into the throat and attack the bronchial passages, and eventually involve the lungs. Many a case of consumption has developed from a severe attack of Catarrh.

The most satisfactory treatment for Catarrh is S. S. S., the unrivaled blood purifier, which so promptly routes and eliminates from the blood the germs of Catarrh. In this way, it gets rid of the cause of the disease by going direct to its source, cleansing the blood thoroughly, and building up and renewing the entire system.

S. S. S. has been on the market for more than fifty years, and has been thoroughly tested in thousands of cases of Catarrh. If you want to be rid of the disease, throw away your makeshift remedies, and begin on S. S. S. today. You will be delighted with the results, as others have been. S. S. S. is sold by drug stores everywhere.

When you begin taking this remedy, you are invited to write for free medical advice and instruction about your own individual case. Address Chief Medical Adviser, 106 Swift Laboratory, Atlanta, Ga.—(Adv.)

RESIDE AT HUBBARD

The residence of Mrs. LaFore, who now resides at Turner, is to be occupied this spring and summer by her daughter, Mrs. Blanche Coe and daughter Agnes. Mrs. Coe served the Government the past year at Astoria in the capacity of police matron. Mr. Coe is in the service and at present at Camp Lewis—Hubbard Enterprise.

For Burning Eczema

Greasy salves and ointments should not be applied if good clear skin is wanted. From any druggist for 35c, or $1.00 for large size, get a bottle of Zemo. When applied as directed it effectively removes eczema, quickly stops itching, and heals skin troubles, also sores, burns, wounds and chafing. It penetrates, cleanses and soothes. Zemo is a clean, dependable and inexpensive, antiseptic liquid. Try it, as we believe nothing you have ever used is as effective and satisfying.
