PRECEDENT GIVES GOVERNORSHIP TO STATE SECRETARY

Decision Handed Down By Supreme Court In 1877 First Of Kind In Oregon.

"The secretary of state, by force of the functions cast upon him becomes governor and consequently entitled to the salary appertaining to the office." The above quotation from an opinion handed down by the Supreme court of the state of Oregon may be found in volume 11, page 389 of the Oregon reports. The case was that of Chadwick vs. Earhart, appealed from Marion county. The judgment of the lower court was reversed and the plaintiff in the case given judgment. S. J. Chadwick, became governor of the state of Oregon, succeeding Governor Grover, who was elected to the United States senate. According to the recollections of A. N. Moores, Grover was elected governor in 1876 and resigned in February 1877. Mr. Chadwick who was secretary of state succeeded as governor and also held both offices until Governor Thayer was elected. Court Sustained Contention. As Earhart would not issue warrants for the payment to Mr. Chadwick for his salary both as governor and secretary of state, suit was brought. The supreme court sustained Chadwick's contention that he was entitled to the two salaries.

Old timers remember that when Mr. Chadwick was governor as well as secretary of state, all his official documents as governor were signed, "S. J. Chadwick, governor, by S. F. Chadwick, secretary of state." In the election held in 1906 for secretary of state, Salem came very near electing one of its citizens as governor. In the republican primaries of that year, according to A. N. Moores, for the office of secretary of state, F. W. Benson of Roseburg was opposed by Lot L. Pearce, F. T. Wrightman and Claud Gatch, all three of Salem. Benson Succeeded Governor. Mr. Benson was elected, but Mr. Gatch ran him a pretty close race. When Chamberlain was elected to the senate, Secretary of State Benson succeeded as governor and drew the two salaries. It is no new thing for the successor of a governor to draw not only his own salary as a state official but that of the governor as well. In 1828 when Governor DeWitt Clinton of New York, died in office, he was succeeded by Nathaniel Pitcher, lieutenant governor. The question arose as to whether Pitcher, acting as governor, was entitled to draw the salary of governor, in addition to that of lieutenant governor. The question was referred to the comptroller who held that he was entitled to both salaries. Cottus vs. Gatch held that if a man is acting governor and performing all the duties of governor, he really is governor in fact and entitled to the salary paid the office. Again in the state of New York, when Martin Van Buren resigned as governor in 1829, the lieutenant governor succeeded him and drew the two salaries.

secure or recommend an attorney for a prisoner; that he refused to search sleepers in the city jail; that he permitted a prisoner to have scissors and nail files in the city jail, contrary to general orders and that he posed as chief of police. It was on these charges preferred by Chief Varney that Mr. Dunlap was found guilty and dismissed from the service.

COUNCIL SUSTAINS CHIEF OF POLICE

J. F. Dunlap Found Guilty And Dismissed From Force Last Night.

J. F. Dunlap, night deskman at the police station, was officially separated from his job by the city council last evening and the charges preferred against him by Chief of Police Varney sustained. With thirteen of the city councilmen present, eight voted that he was guilty as charged and the vote was unanimous that he should be formally dismissed from the service. Although it was practically conceded by those familiar with police conditions that the charges against Mr. Dunlap would be sustained, yet it required about four hours of tiresome testimony and wrangling between attorneys, to bring the matter to a vote.

Wanted to Get to Facts. Councilmen in general are not very patient jurors and at times when the wrangling became too tiresome, some bored councilman would insist upon letting the council by a vote decide whether certain evidence was wanted. The city fathers didn't care a continental about the law on evidence, but just wanted to get down to facts. And anyhow, the whole thing was practically decided before the session began. Macy Prosecuted. Ronald Glover represented Mr. Dunlap and City Attorney Macy conducted the prosecution. As things began to drag a little too much, H. H. Vandervoort, city newspaper councilman from the second ward shouted, "I've heard about all this rag chewing I want. You are talking about a lot of things that have nothing to do with the case."

Mr. Dunlap testified in his own behalf and Chief of Police Varney in behalf of his charges against his former night deskman. The charges against Mr. Dunlap, which the council sustained are as follows: That he was officious and overbearing; that he did not register reports of the night patrolmen; that he removed a girl from the city jail without permission; that he admitted his wife to the woman's department of the city jail, contrary to orders; that he called several times by telephone a girl at the state industrial school; that he attempted to

Because of time lost during the influenza outbreak, no vacation will be allowed between semesters, school beginning at the regular hour Monday morning.
