Flour is now worth 10 cents a sack more than a day or so ago. The figures run from $3.15 to $3.25 a sack, according to quality. The rise is due to the increased cost of wheat, the government having added a premium of 14 cents a bushel to the base price to take care of carrying charges. This is the first advance in the price of flour since the food administration withdrew its control of the milling industry.

Not guilty was the verdict of the jury in the case of the state against Roy Green, charged with the delinquency of a minor. The 15 year old boy in the case, Golda Todd of Sydney testified clearly as to the conduct of the Oregon Electric brakeman, and her testimony was corroborated in every detail by a passenger on the car at the same time. According to rumor around the court house, the jury stood 11 for acquittal and one guilty on the first ballot. Although the case was given to the jury yesterday afternoon at 3 o'clock, it was not until today noon that the jury agreed. John H. McNary appeared for Roy Green and the state was represented by Max Gehlhar, district attorney.

In regard to the case of the city against the Salem Water company, since the circuit court of appeals at San Francisco has denied the city's petition for a rehearing, there are but two things the city can do. Among other matters passing thru the office of the Public service commission yesterday was an order, in response to a demand made a year or more ago, by the Oregon Gas & Electric Co. authorizing a material increase in rates to consumers. This company has been operating through the southern part of the state from Roseburg to Astland, under conditions in which it alleges it has been losing money. The increase, which has been granted only after extensive investigation, is not expected to place the business on a paying basis but to prevent the shutting down of the plants which have been operating since 1912 at a loss because of the limited patronage gained on an expensive equipment.

John Edward Johnson, a soldier whose home is at Marshfield, came to Salem yesterday to get married but found the little preliminaries were rather troublesome. He first got into the sheriff's office and when that office could not procure a marriage license, he expressed the opinion that the office was pretty much on the bum. Then in the county clerk's office, he found he had no physician's certificate, thinking his record as a soldier would cover that. Having secured the certificate, he again appeared at the county clerk's office but this time failed to bring along a witness. He was sent out in quest of a witness. Having finally complied with this part of the law, he was granted a license to marry Carrie Eaton of Salem.

Through the medium of the school teachers of the county, cooperating with the office of W. M. Smith, county superintendent of schools, it is possible that a record will be secured of every man who was in the service during the late war. Questionnaires have been sent to each school teacher in the county and in turn, the teachers have pinned one in every home in which there has been a man in the military service. Already questionnaires are being returned to the office of the county superintendent.
