what it could do. Running true to form it climbed over ditches on North Liberty street and took a dip into Mill creek. Then it walked over some small trees and pushed its way through a thicket of bushes and ravaged around much to the delight of the hundreds of school children who had been turned loose for the occasion.

About 9 o'clock this morning the tank showed itself on State and Commercial streets before going to the exhibition grounds. At Liberty street, Robin Day spoke, telling of the difficulty of watching the tank while in action at the front on account of the shot and shells flying and the big holes through which it had to travel.

Speaking of his experience with the tank, Mr. Day said that at one time the baby tank came to the assistance of himself and comrades who were facing a machine gun nest. The tank just walked right up to the nest of German gunners and that was all there was to it.

This afternoon the fighting machine left for Woodburn over the Southern Pacific local freight. It will then be returned to Albany and Corvallis and Dallas and then to Portland. The mix up on the schedule of the tank and its arrival here early this morning caused thousands to miss the opportunity of seeing a real camouflaged tank and to see a practical demonstration of its workings.

Mary Pickford Coming In "Captain Kid, Jr." Sunday

At first blush it would seem to be a waste of good ink to advertise a film picture by Mary Pickford. "If Mary's in it, it's bound to be good," will be the sentiment of film enthusiasts in Salem, and they will be just as eager to see Mary in her latest Scotch role as any of the past. The directors tell us that she never appeared to better advantage than as the bonny, canny, lovable but irritating lass in "Captain Kid Jr." coming to the Oregon theater Sunday for a three day run. This is a whimsically delightful offering with the merit of great originality, and the charm of freshness and quiet character delineation. It scored a genuine success on the legitimate stage throughout the country, and on the film it has lost nothing of its effectiveness. It has to do with a picturesque old book store proprietor, his charming granddaughter, a talented young author who is in love, and a hidden treasure the search for which brings out a series of peculiarly comical situations. In this play Mary Pickford is supported by an exceptionally fine cast.

A straw vote taken by The Dallas Chamber of Commerce on referendum measures to be voted on in June was practically unanimous against the proposed Roosevelt memorial highway. Other measures received majority votes.

Binshey was quoted as having said that it would cost about $13,500 a mile to construct the road after the manner had been prepared. The building of the 150 miles of hard surfaced roads will be in the hands of the county court. Harley O. White said there was no danger in the way Salem would vote as the city was undoubtedly for good roads. He said that in some communities he had heard from, where there was strong opposition to the bonding bill of five years ago, that with changed conditions and the fact that the county court would construct the roads, everybody was in favor of the measure.

Dealers to Organize. A. W. Schrunk said that he was assured that the farmers would support the good roads movement as it was a good business proposition for him. He referred to the good roads measure of five years ago as a pleasure road and the present proposed market roads as business roads.

Lee Gilbert, Elgin Six distributor, said this must be a fine country for automobiles as about every car made is now represented in the city. He suggested that the automobile dealers should organize to talk good roads. With 2000 cars in Salem and vicinity, he thought that if every owner of a car was interested in the proposed good roads, that the measure should easily carry, especially if every year owner in the county lined up for good roads. To follow out the ideas of Mr. Gilbert, it was arranged to organize the automobile dealers in the city that each might work in the campaign for hard surfaced roads. Mr. Gilbert said that for its size, Salem is said to have more cars than any city in the United States, and yet, mud holes could be found within a few miles of the city almost in any direction.

"I've always been very conservative on any bonding proposition but now is our time to go ahead. The road proposition is the most important in Oregon," declared T. B. Kay.
