

Bitter or Better Baking

A letter makes a great difference in a word. A word makes a great difference in baking powders.

If the little word "alum" appears on the label it may mean bitter baking.

If the word ROYAL stands out bold and strong, it surely means BETTER baking.

This is only one reason why it pays to use plans to fly northeast and if the weather continues favorable, to lay a course direct for Trepassey. As Halifax is not far off the direct air line between here and Trepassey, Read can fly in the direction of Halifax and still be able to head for Trepassey without losing time or increasing mileage.

Only the men stationed at the naval aviation base and a group of fisher folk saw the NC-4 start. A few minutes after Commander Read went aboard from a naval launch, the morning lines were cast off and in a moment the deep throated roar of the four powerful engines broke out.

The big seaplane turned, straightened out and then gathered speed, rapidly lifted from the sea and soared away to the northeast.

Good Weather Prospect.
As the NC-4 departed the crowd on the shore cheered and the crew of the plane waved farewell. Commander Read and his men were in great spirits and started the flight confident of reaching Trepassey without further trouble.

An old Cape Cod fisherman who watched the start of the plane squinted at the sky, took a look about the harbor and remarked that the gulls were heading to sea, a sign that mariners declare means good weather. Gulls remain close to shore and in harbors when a storm or heavy winds are due.

NC-4 Gets Away.
Chatham, Mass., May 14.—The seaplane NC-4 started the flight for Trepassey Bay, N. F., at 9:05 o'clock this morning.

Local weather conditions were ideal for flying, there was only a light breeze and the sea was calm. Reports from points between here and New Foundland and from ships in the north Atlantic indicated that the big plane will encounter good weather all the way to Trepassey Bay.

Halifax Reached
Halifax, N. S., May 14.—The NC-4 arrived here this afternoon. The big seaplane, completing the first leg of her flight from Chatham to Trepassey, N. F., alighted in the harbor here at 2:10 p. m. (1:10 New York time.)

The NC-4 left the station at Chatham Mass., at 9:05 a. m. (This time is unofficial.)

The plan was to stop at Halifax for only a short time and then continue the trip to Trepassey, where the NC-1 and NC-3 are waiting to fly to the Azores en route to Europe.

During the flight from Chatham to Halifax a record for wireless communication was established when Commander Read talked by wireless telephone with the government receiving station at Otter Cliffs, replying to a message from Secretary of the Navy Roosevelt, his reply being flashed broadcast by wireless telegraph to foreign countries and ships at sea three minutes after Roosevelt's original message was sent to him.

During the flight the NC-4 was in almost constant wireless communication with land stations, patrol boats and with the navy department at Washington.

Dirigible Passes Chatham
Chatham, Mass., May 14.—The navy dirigible C-5 which started from Mountauk, N. Y. for Newfoundland today, passed over the aviation base here at 10:10 o'clock today.

The airship was flying at a moderate height at a speed of between 35 and 40 miles an hour. She held a northeast course from here, which will take the ship some distance out to sea.

BOLSHEVIKI SEEKING

Lenine and the other bolsheviki leaders, but they think both Wilson and his plan have fallen victim to capital with which the bolsheviki will make no compromise.

Makowski who is better known by his pen name, C. P. Kaschoff, has been in Berlin several weeks. He is one of Lenine's favorite pupils and worked all through the Russian revolution as one of the premier's lieutenants. Now he is entrusted with what the Russians consider their most important post, Berlin. Makowski says his mission is not so secret as it would appear. He says the German office is looking at him from behind a hand which it will pull down at the proper time.

"They will soon hunt me up and say with surprise, 'oh, there you are,' he said.

"How fortunate you are here. We did not know you were so close at hand," and then we will get down to business and resume relations and the red flag will again float over the Russian embassy on Under den Linden."

According to Makowski the Germans already have made some bungling attempts to establish relations with Lenine. The most notable one was when they sent a merchant to Moscow, he said. Lenine agreed to make concessions and put this German up in a fine house and fed him very well. The German finally became a bolsheviki himself and had to be called back because of the wild messages he sent to Berlin by wireless.

Keep Bourgeois Down.
Makowski says the bourgeoisie must be kept out of the government until the new system is established and until everyone becomes one of the proletariat by reason of working. Hence the discrimination against the bourgeoisie by the soviet government. This discrimination, according to Makowski, is only temporary.

The communism which the bolsheviki are establishing in Russia is working out according to expectations, it is maintained by Makowski. He claims the peasants are producing more and workers have increased their output with fewer hours of labor.

An exception is in the big cities where people are hungry because the bolsheviki have not transportation necessary to get food to the people. This, he said, is because the bolsheviki fell heir to a rundown railway system and the rolling stock that could be used had to be employed to carry troops to the defense of the country.

whether Senators Penrose and Warren shall be chairman of the finance and appropriations committees—was not expected to come up, except indirectly. That will be decided at a later caucus when the committee on committees makes its report.

The business of today's republican caucus is the selection of the president pro tem, who presides over the senate in the absence of the vice-president; choice of candidates for senate clerical offices and naming of the committee of committees, steering committee to guide legislation and the committee on patronage.

Progressives planned to present the names of Senator Kenyon, of Iowa, and James, of Washington, as their candidates for members of the committee on committees, which will have nine members.
