Monmouth's Third "Flu" Epidemic Nearly Wiped Out

(Capital Journal Special Service.)
Monmouth, Or., May 13—Monmouth's third flu epidemic promises to be ended very soon. Dena Todd reports that of the forty-three cases that were cared for at the dormitory, only two are not fully recovered. These are normal, however, and will doubtless be out in a day or two. All cases reported were mild again this time as before, but seemed peculiarly contagious. In several instances whole families were down with it so it was necessary to secure outside help. The local Red Cross provided cooked food and other necessities for afflicted families during this time of need. Professor Gault, Mrs. Strumbach, Miss Lewis and Miss Brainberg were among the normal people who were ill. Three nurses were employed at the dormitory but were dismissed several days ago. From present indications the wave has passed as there have been no new cases for over a week. It is very probable that all schools will open next Monday morning. Monmouth has not had a single death from influenza.

Businessmen Discuss Means of Reducing Insurance Rate and Increasing Protection

Why the business man should be obliged to pay higher insurance rates now with the efficient fire department and the passing of the Keroseene lamp than he did several years ago when the city had only a hand pump fire engine is a little more than the average business man can figure out.
At the meeting held last evening of the Business Men's League of the Commercial Club Harvey Wells, state insurance commissioner, spoke on the insurance problem. He said the businessmen should have lower rates in Salem and suggested that one of the quickest ways to be assured of lower rates would be to install additional fire alarm boxes and to provide the fire department with a hook and ladder company that could handle fires on the third and fourth floors of business blocks.
Dan J. Fry, who said he had been a business man here for 35 years, couldn't understand why, with the improved fire department, chemical engine, new truck and efficient fire department, insurance rates had been gradually increasing, especially since Salem had had no disastrous fires in 30 years, except the flouring mills.
Commissioner Wells explained that a good fire record of a city does not lower and referred to the experience of Wisconsin, where he said the state was in debt in its insurance department.

As to conditions in Salem, Commissioner Wells said: "Our inspectors went through the city. Conditions are bad right in the heart of the business district. On one floor was seen a stove with the wood charred all around it. In another location in the center of the business district was piled up rubbish, such as could easily be lighted from a cigarette. In another gasoline was stored around loose. Salem has no ordinance that will compel the business men right in the heart of the business district to keep the alleys clean."
It developed that a city is inspected by the state insurance department only on request. That is, if Salem wants to know whether it is getting the right rate and whether lax conditions prevail, it must request the state department of insurance for inspectors.
Mr. Wells resented the insinuation that he was appearing in Salem on insurance companies. He said he was just stating conditions as they are and that he was more than willing to help the situation in Salem and aid in helping lower rates. "It is not my duty to inspect cities unless asked," declared the commissioner.
W. H. Dancy said: "We have a good fire department, but not enough. We need another pumping engine. If anything should happen to the pump, we would be up against it. If the Spaulding mill should get on fire not a fireman could get within a block of it if the wind was blowing strong from the west. We need a hook and ladder truck like Corvallis."
On motion of Mr. Dancy, Director E. H. Cline appointed a committee consisting of H. W. Meyers, D. J. Fry and W. H. Dancy to bring the matter of more fire equipment before the city council.
Wm. Gahldorf said that he knew of an alley in the business part of the city that was a regular fire trap, with excelsior, straw and paper stacked up, almost inviting a fire.
Mr. Wells suggested that an ordinance be passed whereby the fire department would keep one man busy inspecting the city and requiring owners and tenants to keep premises in good
