For those who are interested in figures, especially where three come along at a time, attention has been called to the date of May 19, 1919, the first day of the Odd Fellows grand encampment. In this date, it will be observed that the figure "1" occurs three times and also the figure "9." It has been suggested that these three figures, the date of the first day of the present Odd Fellow and Rebekah sessions, are suggestive of the three links of Odd Fellowship.

J. M. Shelley of Eugene who is attending the grand encampment is one of the old timers when it comes to dating back to the time he arrived in Oregon and to the time he joined Olive lodge No. 18 of Salem. He arrived in Oregon by the wagon route in 1848 and has lived in the state about 70 years. It was on Feb. 4, 1871 that he joined Olive lodge No. 18 of Salem, the lodge which was later merged into Chemeketa lodge No. 1. Mr. Shelley has been wearing the 40 year jewel of Odd Fellowship a number of years and in about one and one half years will be entitled to the 50 year jewel. He will celebrate his 76th birthday tomorrow, part in Salem and part at his home in Eugene.

The city has petitioned the public service commission, asking that the Southern Pacific railroad be compelled to install a signalling device at the crossing on Union and Capitol streets. This hearing will be held Friday, May 23, at 10 o'clock in the morning at the state house before the public service commission. The railroad will put up a hard fight against installing any signalling device whatever, it is understood. The city has taken action on account of the many complaints regarding the dangers of the crossing, where so many accidents have occurred. City Attorney Macy says that unless people who are interested appear before the commission and assist the city in making a strong case, the probabilities are the commission will refuse to grant the relief asked for by the city. So far, none of the people who complained of the dangers of the crossing have volunteered by their testimony to assist the city in making a strong showing.

There is no joy for the housekeeper who is looking for lower prices, one of the leading grocers said this morning. Coffee that sold at 25 cents a pound a few months ago is now retailing at 40 cents, and the 40 cent a pound coffee is worth 55 cents. All fats and commodities are going up. A pair of lard that brought $1.35 not so many weeks ago is now retailing at $1.65. Cottole and Crisco have advanced two cents a pound within the past ten days. In fact about the only thing in the world going down in prices is automobile tires within the past few days, and postage stamps on July 1.

Modern Woodmen attention, all members of the degree team be present Thursday night. By order of the chief.

E. E. La Fave of Vancouver, Wn. writes the Commercial club to find out if there are any plants in Salem for the distilling of pepperoni. He writes he has raised considerable this year and would also like some information as to how to gather it and then how to sell it.

At the annual meeting of the Women's auxiliary of the Diocese of Oregon, held at Grace Memorial church in Portland, Mrs. E. Strupler, St. Paul's auxiliary of this city, was elected second vice president. A number of delegates from Salem were present.

Among the manuscript documents of historic value that have come into the state library recently is a letter written in 1907 by the late Joaquin Miller and addressed to C. B. Watson of Ashland. It is in the nature of a protest against certain names of rivers and mountains of Oregon, and deals particularly with the name "Rogue river" which he undertakes to prove is a corruption of the French name "Rouge river" supposed to have been derived from the red color of the water in certain seasons of the year when the iron red soil was washed into it from the mountains. This letter was written with a quill pen—the only type of pen the poet would consent to use. Consequently the orthography is almost illegible. This letter was written at the time the genial old man was aspiring to a seat in the Oregon senate—an ambition that is probably unknown to the majority of his admirers. What prompted him to this will never be known, for he was not the type of man who is ordinarily immune against attacks of political fever. It may be news to some also, that he considered himself an Oregonian, though his name is invariably associated with the mountains of California.

Miss Cornelia Marvin, of the state library, wishes to secure files of the Independent covering the past two years, for use in the library. Any person having old copies of this publication which they do not care to preserve will confer a favor by leaving them at the library or by notifying Miss Marvin.

In the recent convention of Foresters held in Portland, Charles Ramp of this city was elected to the office of grand chief ranger.

Two five hundred dollar subscriptions have recently been added to the fund for the new dormitory of Willamette university; one of them from Salem and the other from a friend in Perryville. The subscriptions have now reached approximately $30,000. It is probable that the $50,000 needed would have been largely subscribed by this time had it not been for the drain upon pocketbooks caused by the national bond issues, the centenary campaign and various other demands. The donations are said to be coming much more freely now than in past months.

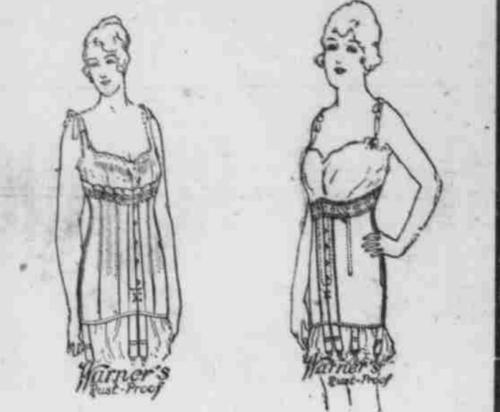

The Salem high school team will cross bats and yells with the Albany team on the university diamond Saturday afternoon. It is reported that the Albany men have defeated two teams once defeated by the Salem team so the visitors may prove foe-men worthy of their curves.

Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Jenks and Mr. and Mrs. Jos. Albert made up an auto party leaving this morning for Portland, going by way of Carlton in order to take in the Jersey Cattle Breeders picnic at that point. They are among the Salem people who are going to hear McCormack sing.

Voters to the number of 14,578 have registered in Marion county for the special election to be held June 3. Basing this registration on those of the past years and the vote that followed, it is estimated that Marion county will cast not more than 8000 votes at the coming election unless the special interest in good roads brings the voters out in unusual numbers. Last fall there was a total registration of 17,315 for the election which was mostly political and the vote in the county was only 9307, and this was a general election when there is a strong interest in politics. For the primary election in May of 1918 the registration was 17,125. With this number registered, only 8410 took the trouble to go to the polls. At the special election held June 4, 1917, there was a registration of 17,835 and yet of this number only 7117 took the trouble to vote. As no primary election have the voters come out in proportion to registration as they have at general elections. These figures are furnished by U. G. Boyer, county clerk and are taken from the official records on file. In general, it may be said that not even one half of the people who are registered and are entitled to vote, take the trouble to go to the polls on election day.

County Roadmaster Culver says that he has five crews working on the road between Jefferson and Jackson hill. Part of this road which is to be the Pacific highway is on the old roadbed while some of the mileage is through new ground and the crews are engaged in grubbing and blasting out stumps. The new road on this part of the highway covers about six miles.
