The Canadian service airplanes that circled Salem Wednesday noon played in hard lock when the aviator Lieutenant Pearson attempted to make a landing near Dallas. The field apparently looked all right for a landing but there happened to be a rather deep hole in it and into this hole the airplane found its way, breaking the propellers. Neither of the occupants of the plane were injured. It was dismantled and sent to Portland for repairs to be made ready for the exhibit at Baker. The manager of the plane hoped to do some commercial flying here this week but as the Commercial club had entered into an arrangement with Lieutenant Browne, he received no encouragement.
