DAVIDSON-KIRK WEDDING

One of the lovely June weddings was solemnized when Miss Eleanor Kirk was married to Mr. Edward Davidson of St. Paul at the St. Paul church, Wednesday, June 18, in the presence of a large assembly of guests. The ceremony was read by Rev. George Chabot at 3:30. The church and altar were artistically decorated in Dorothy Perkins and white roses.

Miss Louise Kirk, sister of the bride, was maid of honor. Her gown was white net over pale pink satin, and wore a pink lace hat. Little Miss Zella Davidson acted as flower girl, carrying a basket of sweet peas, while Master McKay carried the ring in a large white lily.

Ray J. Glatt was the attendant of the bridegroom.

Following the church ceremony, an informal reception for the immediate family and intimate friends of the bride and groom was held at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Kirk.

Mr. and Mrs. Davidson after a brief trip will make their home in St. Paul. —Woodburn Independent.

CALIFORNIA BUYER WANTS CHERRY CROP

A.C. Raas Now Making Headquarters At Salem Fruit Union.

If the Willamette valley cherry grower should start out to find the one single factor that stands between him and a possible loss in the cherry business he could find it quickest in the packing house of the Salem Fruit Union in the shape of a short, thick-set, energetic little man in shirt-sleeves, who handles the king's English with a slightly foreign accent. He doesn't look like a million dollars, but that is about what he represents to the Willamette valley—if he is properly utilized.

A. C. Raas, representing the California Glace Fruit company, has been coming to Salem for fruit supplies during the past 16 years, making a specialty of cherries for the maraschino process of preserving. In other years he called for only the finer grades of Royal Anne cherries for this purpose, because the ordinary dark cherry was not firm enough to stand up in the preserving process. But within the past few years Mr. Raas, who is an expert in this branch of chemistry, has perfected a process of bleaching and preserving by which he takes any old variety of cherry in almost any condition of development, bleaches it out, then charges it with sugar, flavor and coloring so that they all come out alike—handsome and delicious—in the finished process. He tells an interesting story of the delicate and intricate processes; but the most interesting part to the grower is the fact that he can utilize fruit that would otherwise be almost unmarketable—half ripe, under-sized and even rain-cracked fruit. They all come out of the preserving process a delicious, bright-colored product.

The fact that the Glace Fruit company can make use of low grade product, as well as furnish an unlimited market for the highest grade of fruit means much to the growers; in fact, it might mean the difference between profit and loss in harvesting a fruit crop. Mr. Raas states that their company is the oldest on the coast, is working on the broadest scale, and has perfected the finest process of handling fruit. They are continually enlarging their scope of operations, and will in future take up the manufacture of jams and jellies in order to utilize every pound of fruit. He estimates that the plant furnishes a market for 3000 tons of cherries alone, along with ten or twelve thousand tons of assorted fruits for the glaze products.

CONGRESS "DRYS"

Representatives Steele, Pennsylvania; Igoe and Dyer, Missouri; Gard, Ohio and Calson, Wisconsin, will sign this request.

Palmer's Attitude Firm

Beer and in some cases light wine were still being sold in many cities, according to reports received here. These advances indicated there was much confusion as to Attorney General Palmer would do about enforcing the law with regard to beer containing 2.75 per cent alcohol.

Palmer's official statement of his policy said he could not grant exemption from prosecution to dealers in 2.75 per cent beer, although the courts have not yet decided whether the law applies to it. But at the same time the wording of his statement left him free, it was held, to delay acting against 2.75 per cent dealers until the courts do rule, if he saw fit to take that course. This was interpreted generally as meaning that dealers could continue to sell such beer at their own risk—and many took the risk.

There was no cloudiness, however, about Palmer's attitude toward hard liquors. He announced flatly that all dealers in such products would be prosecuted.

Wets Look to Wilson

Thus John Barleycorn was in moribund condition, but he still had a slight pulse, docto the belief that President Wilson would lift the war time prohibition ban as soon as demobilization was completed. Opinions varied widely as to what constitutes complete demobilization, drys asserting it would not be complete until the army and navy were both down to a peace footing, which would carry war time prohibition right into constitutional, permanent prohibition next January. Wets believed it would come in time to give the nation a few more drinking weeks before liquor becomes unconstitutional.

War time prohibition was voted by congress as a rider to the agricultural appropriation bill of 1918. It was intended to conserve foodstuffs which were going into the manufacture of drink. Representative Barkley, Kentucky, introduced the rider.

125,000 Saloons Close.

According to figures gathered by the Anti-Saloon League and other interested agencies 125,000 saloons failed to open their doors today, or opened only for the sale of beer and light wines.

The United States employment service was unable to present complete statistics of the number of men thrown out of work, but unofficially the estimates ran into hundreds of thousands, including bottlers, truck drivers and many other trades, as well as bartenders. Officials of the employment service, however expressed confidence in their ability to find work for all.
