MEN: Suits are very hard to secure—nearly impossible at this time as the manufacturers cannot supply the demand.

They range in variety from Palm Beach to the Bishop Tailored Suit, and the quality cannot be surpassed elsewhere.

Someone once said: "That a green salesman might sell something once in awhile, but a blue one would never sell anything." This is true; Bishop's salesmen are all experts—and there's a lot in that.

We have Four Tailors busy each day and if you need a suit for the Fourth of July or for any occasion—at short notice—COME TO US.

They are all cheerful, and make you feel "at home". We consider all customers our guests and service is the important part in our merchandising.

"You'll like the spirit of this store."

35 PEOPLE INJURED IN EXPLOSION OF BIG NAVY DIRIGIBLE C-8 TUESDAY

Baltimore, Md., July 1.—At least 35 persons were injured this afternoon when the naval dirigible C-8, en route from Cape May to Washington, exploded in an open field near Camp Holabird. The concussion was felt in many parts of the city and windows of houses nearby were smashed by flying metal.

A partial list of the injured included the commander, Lieutenant N. J. Learned, Navigation Officer R. D. Wickerbaker, Pilot Ensign C. W. Tyndall, Warrant Officer Engineer B. F. Sherman, Machinist's Mate Keller, Radio Operator Lynch and two passengers, Lieutenant Commander Quigley and Junior Lieutenant A. B. Tibburne.

DIRIGIBLE R-34

20 minutes after leaving East Porton, Scotland.

Was directly west of her starting point and was making 40 miles an hour. This information, contained in the latest wireless dispatch received from her by the admiralty, stated that all was going well on board.

Shortly after noon the air ministry received a wireless saying the R-34 had encountered a thick fog 450 sea miles out from her starting point, and had reduced her speed to 32 knots.

Start Made Early

London, July 2.—(United Press)—Bowling along at a speed of forty knots, the huge British dirigible R-34 was more than 300 miles out on her flight to America at 8 a. m. (3 a. m. New York time) this morning. The British admiralty received a wireless from her at that hour giving her location as latitude 55.50 north and longitude 10.40 west. This would place her about 300 miles off the west coast of Ireland.

The dirigible—the largest in the world—began her trans-Atlantic flight at 2:40 a. m., taking the air from East Porton, Scotland. She wireless stated the craft had averaged 45 knots up to that hour. Her slightly reduced speed was believed to have resulted from encountering head winds.

She had changed her course slightly and was headed a little north of west. An earlier wireless from the R-34 said:

"Off Rothlin Island at 5:50 a. m. Steering west. Going well."

(Signed) "Scott." Rothlin Island is in the North channel, between Ireland and Scotland, 125 miles west of Edinburgh.

Crew on Edge

East Porton, Scotland, July 2.—The British dirigible R-34, which started for America at 2:40 o'clock this morning (9:40 p. m. Tuesday, New York time), is speeding toward America today on the first trans-Atlantic flight of a lighter than air craft.

Bugles sounded at 1:27, calling the ship from its aerodrome. At 1:47 the dirigible was in position to fly. As searchlights lit up the sky, the crew clambered aboard. Six hundred men were employed to bring the dirigible from its shed.

As the great adventure neared, the crew became visibly excited. Lieutenant Commander Zachery

Lansdowne, of the United States navy, making the trip at the invitation of the British navy, emerged from his cabin clad in fur and resembling an Arctic explorer. Flushed and smiling, he said to the United Press:

Arrive on Fourth

"I feel great. I would rather fly across than travel in a boat. The elements will be smoother and personal danger does not exist. The weather is almost ideal."

Climbing into his room, he turned back and shook the hand of the correspondent.

"Here's luck," were his farewell words.

Bound for America, the R-34 disappeared into the mist soon after leaving the ground. Major Scott, commander of the ship, said he expected to reach Long Island Friday, the Fourth of July.

Commander Lansdowne will be given the honor of steering the big boat to its landing place at Hazelhurst.

Final tests of the R-34 were most satisfactory.

Preparatory to sailing, members of the crew rolled up their extra clothing, each man taking a complete change. All of the officers carried small suitcases.

Major Scott voiced the sentiments of the crew when he said:

"I haven't the slightest doubt that we will reach America."

Big Ship Roomy

Commander Lansdowne told the correspondent the officers would take turns steering.

"When not working," he said, "we can remain in the cockpit or up stairs. There need be no lack of physical exercise. If we wish we can take constitutional up and down the deck, which is nearly an eighth of a mile long, or can climb the ladder to the gun platform on top of the gun band, where there is a place for a two inch cannon."

Wireless Operator Edwards said he expected the ship would get into communication with the Harbor Grace station at Newfoundland the moment the flight was started.

"We have a splendid wireless capacity," he said, "we can communicate over a radius of about 4500 miles. The antennae drop 400 feet below the decks."

A British non-rigid machine escorted the R-34 as far as Ireland.

The body of Charles Bangleford, 65 years old, a pioneer resident of Idaho, was found Saturday in his cabin near Lewisston with a gunshot wound thru the head, indicating possible murder.

Attorney Governor Louis P. Hart of Washington will be a candidate at the coming election to succeed the late Governor Ernest Lister.
