FRUIT UNION STOPPED

ness unless the members of the Union were forced to deliver to the Union.

The injunction was not against growers but against the Salem Fruit Union only. This left the growers who are members of the Salem Fruit Union the option to deliver or not to deliver, and as the original contract price was for three cents, the growers are not delivering, have been released of their contracts. The open market today for loganberries has reached nine cents.

ganberries has reached nine cents.

Hence in order that the Salem Fruit Union may have logans to deliver to the Phez company, the three stockholders have appeared before Judge Bingham, asking that an injunction be issued against the Salem Fruit Union ordering the Union to compel deliveries to it of the loganberries grown by its 88 members who signed the 1918 contracts.

In its complaint the three stockholders, Louis Lachmund, J. R. Linn and S. M. Endicott allege that the Salem Fruit Union entered into a contract in 1918 with 88 of its growers to market the berries, and that the growers agreed to deliver all their logans at 3 1/2 cents a pound.

That on May 15, 1919, the Salem Fruit Union refused to make deliveries to the Phez company and that it advised the 88 growers to make no delivery in 1919.

It is further alleged by the three stockholders, that the directors of the Union have the power to compel its growers to deliver the berries to the Union, whereby the same would be delivered to the Phez company.

That notwithstanding its authority to compel delivery, the directors of the Union are advising and counseling its members not to deliver their logans to the Union. That although the directors and manager have been asked to compel its members to deliver logans and to take the necessary legal proceedings to compel delivery, they are making no effort to do so.

It is further alleged by the three stockholders, Lachmund, Linn and Endicott, that the present market price of loganberries is eight cents and that by not delivering 1200 tons to the Phez company, said company would be damaged to the extent of $108,000, considering the difference in the three cents and the present eight cents market price.

That the total assets of the Salem Fruit Union is $47,000. That in any suit is brought for the non-delivery of berries to the Phez company, the entire assets of the Salem Fruit Union might be dissipated and that the stock of the three stockholders would be made valueless.

Hence they ask Judge Bingham for a writ of mandamus directed to the directors of the Salem Fruit Union and Robert C. Paulus, manager, ordering the directors and manager to bring suit against the 88 growers to compel them to deliver to the Union, their 1918 loganberries.

The hearing was before Judge Bingham Tuesday evening at 5 o'clock. He has issued a summons for a hearing Monday morning at 10 o'clock.

According to the generally accepted legal opinion, the injunction granted last Saturday against the Salem Fruit Union had nothing whatever to do with the growers, leaving them at liberty to dispose of their berries. The injunction was only against the Union. Now the three stockholders ask that the officers of the Union take action to compel deliveries on a contract which it is understood has already been cancelled.

betting on the outcome of the struggle remains practically stationary. Odds on Willard are being quoted at 10 to 8, with little money having been placed so far. Many freak bets are offered. Several betting men here offer to let the fan write his own ticket if he believes he can pick the round for a knock out. One to five is being asked for a wager that Willard fails to respond for the bell in the sixth.

Crowds Overflow Tents.

Toledo is beginning to light up for the struggle with the army of guests she will have July 4. Hotels are overflowing now, with healthy prices being charged in hotels and rooming houses. A large vacant building on a downtown street corner has been loaded with army cots and an eating house opened next door to take care of the overflow.

Tents have made their appearance in the outskirts, near the arena. Visitors in some instances brought them in automobiles.

Jack Kearns is said to have placed $16,000 of his own and Dempsey's money that Jack will win by a knockout. These wagers have been placed in various sections of the country through commissioners.

It has become practically impossible to place a bet in Toledo, due to the fact that local boxing fans have placed all the money they want to and also due to the popularity of the challenger. Even those who believe Willard will be returned victor are so partial to Dempsey because of his good nature that they are reluctant to bet against him. One bet of $10,000 at even money was said to have been made. This is the largest single wager reported here.

Willard Termed Ready.

Willard sparred yesterday, stopping lively through six rounds. He announced he would go through about the same program today, but would taper off in other work. He is tired of training and would like to stop.

Dempsey's training has reached such a point that many experts have expressed a fear that he may go stale. Jimmy DeForest and Jack Kearns have scoffed at this and declared it impossible, but it is a fact that Dempsey was on edge two weeks ago and has worked hard every day since.

The examination made by Dr. Joseph Sweeney on the Willard anatomy has impressed many persons with the chances of the champion. They contend that so long as Willard is in condition it will be impossible to defeat him. Willard himself is brimming full of confidence. He is making plans for his after the bout activities, and he was willing to fight again if he wins.

ware which Mr. Spencer claimed that Borgfeldt & Co. shipped him not according to orders. Before Justice Urak's court, Mr. Spencer was awarded $208 damages, but as he owed the Borgfeldt company $108, the net amount was placed at $100. From this judgment the Borgfeldt company appealed to the circuit court.
