Announcement--Bargain Day, Sat. July 12

It has been well advertised and the public expects "BARGAINS." The honor of every merchant of Salem is at stake—ours especially—as the public has adopted "MEYERS" as the standard for FAIR DEALING, SERVICE and QUALITY GOODS. We shall sustain our past reputation, and on "BARGAIN DAY" will give you every opportunity to save. What you read in our "Ad" will be true, and the goods will be ALL OUR OWN, not specially purchased for a sale.

BEAR THIS IN MIND—Prices today are higher than they ever have been and still advancing, and also—merchandise is hard to get—but, in spite of these conditions we will be the Leaders in "BARGAIN DAY" and charge our loss to advertising.

ambitions, the international councils and expedients, out of which the sinister designs of Germany had sprung as a natural growth.

Principles Accepted as Just.

It had been our privilege to formulate the principles which were accepted as the basis of peace, but they had been accepted not because we had come in to hasten and assure the victory and insisted upon them, but because they were readily accepted to as the principles to which honorable and enlightened minds everywhere had been bred. They spoke the conscience of the world as well as the conscience of America, and I am happy to pay my tribute of respect and gratitude to the able, forward-looking men with whom it was my privilege to co-operate for their unfailing spirit of co-operation; their constant effort to accommodate the interests they represented to the principles we all agreed upon. The difficulties, which were many, lay in the circumstances, not often in the men. Almost without exception the men who led had caught the true and full vision of the problem of peace as an indivisible whole, a problem not of mere adjustments of interest, but of justice and right action.

Small Nation's Freed.

The atmosphere in which the conference worked seemed created not by the ambitions of strong governments but by the hopes and aspirations of small nations and of peoples hitherto under bondage to the power that victory had shattered and destroyed. The two great empires had been forced into political bankruptcy and we were the receivers. Our task was not only to make peace with the central empires and right the wrongs their armies had done. The central empires had lived in open violation of many of the very right for which the war had been fought, dominating alien peoples over whom they had not natural right to rule, enforcing not obedience, but veritable bondage; exploiting those who were weak for the benefit of those who were masters and overlords only by force of arms.

There could be no peace until the whole order of central Europe was set right.

New Nations Created.

That meant that new nations were to be created—Poland, Czechoslovakia, Hungary itself. No part of ancient Poland had ever in any true sense become a part of Germany or of Austria or of Russia. Bohemia was alien in every thought and hope to the monarchy of which she had so long been an artificial part; and the uneasy partnership between Austria and Hungary had been one rather of interest than of kinship or sympathy. The Slovaks whom Austria had chosen to force into her empire on the south were kept to their obedience by nothing but fear. Their hearts were with their kinsmen in the Balkans. These were all arrangements of power, not arrangements of natural union or association. It was the imperative task of those who would make peace and make it intelligently to establish a new order which would rest upon the free choice of people rather than upon the arbitrary authority of the Hapsburgs or Hohenzollerns.

More than that, great populations bound by sympathy and actual kin to Rumania were also linked against their will to the conglomerate Austro-Hungarian monarchy or to other alien sovereignties, and it was part of the task of peace to make a new Rumania, as well as a new Slavic state clustering about Serbia.

Frontiers Had to Be Made.

And so natural frontiers could be found to these new fields of adjustment and redemption. It was necessary to look constantly forward to other related tasks. The German colonies were to be disposed of. They had not been governed; they had been exploited merely, without thought of the interest or even the ordinary human rights of their inhabitants.

The Turkish empire, moreover, had fallen apart as the Austro-Hungarian had. It had never had any real unity. It had been held together only by pitiless, inhuman force until its peoples cried aloud for release, for succor from unspeakable distress, for all that the new day of hope seemed at last to bring within its dawn.

Peoples hitherto in utter darkness were to be led out into the same light and given at last a helping hand. Undeveloped peoples and peoples ready for recognition, but not yet ready to assume the full responsibilities of statehood, were to be given adequate guarantees of friendly protection, guidance and assistance.

Safeguards Created.

And out of the exertion of these great enterprises of liberty sprang opportunities to attempt what statesmen had never been found the way before to do; an opportunity to throw safeguards about the rights of racial national and religious minorities by solemn international covenant; an opportunity to limit and regulate military establishments where they were most likely to be mischievous; an opportunity to effect a complete and systematic internationalization of waterways and railways, which were necessary to the free economic life of more than one nation and to clear many of the normal channels of commerce of unfair constructions of law or of privilege; and the very welcome opportunity to secure for labor the concerted protection of definite international pledges of principle and practice.

These were not tasks which the conference had undertaken to do.
