Judge George G. Hingham this morning granted the injunction asked for by the Kings' Products company against J. W. LaBelle, requiring him to deliver to the company his logan berries at 5 1/2 cents a pound. He is among the several growers who were sued by the Kings' Products company a few days ago for the delivery of berries contracted, but which was compromised by the agreement that the growers should deliver at 2 1/2 cents, while the company should deposit with the court the difference between 5 1/2 cents a pound and the market price. However, Mr. LaBelle did not unite with the other growers' suit, and hence injunction was brought against him individually.
