The people of Turner will meet this evening and vote as to whether the school district wants to add vocational agricultural to the course of study. There is but one vocational agricultural course taught in the country, and that is at Woodburn. Should the Turner district adopt this course, a special teacher will be assigned to the district, and the state and federal government will pay one-half of the salary of the teacher. It is estimated that with the outside help, and salary from pupils coming to Turner to take the special course, that it will cost the Turner district about $700 extra. PIONEER "CASH" DRUG STORE WILL MOVE INTO NEW QUARTERS AUG. 1

Dr. S. C. Stone, physician and druggist, who has been doing business in the same location on North Commercial street for the past 18 years, announced this morning that he would move his store to 159 South Commercial street by August 1. The store room is just about opposite the Capital Journal.

Dr. Stone is the pioneer cash druggist in the state and years ago announced on his letter heads that he was the only cash druggist in Oregon. He has always adhered to the cash system, and to this, besides close attention to business, practicing self denial and a lot of "sticktiveness," he attributes his remarkable success in business.

Dr. Stone was born in Coles county, near Charleston, Illinois, in 1847. When but 16 years old he drove an ox team across the Rocky mountains and made his home with his father near Silverton. After attending the district school, he later graduated from the medical department of Willamette university and completed his medical education in New York city.

After leaving New York, he located at Milton, Oregon, as druggist and general practicing physician. Arriving there with $600, after 13 years, he sold out his interests for $15,000.

He then located in 1896 on North Commercial street in the Cottle building, removing to his present store in 1901. Dr. and Mrs. Stone have one daughter, Mrs. O. J. Hall of Salem.

He was committed from Baker county for burglary, having a previous record of time in the Idaho penitentiary.
