The United States did not have enough men to prevent border raids. Ford said he was taking the opposite side. "Again the president getting troops to defend the border?" Stevenson asked. Ford said he did not know President Wilson had been on preparedness tours when the peace advertisements appeared, but he had heard of "slaughters on the Mexican border" although he claimed there was no war there at the time. "Couldn't there be a war unless war was declared?" "There could be a riot." "But this was not a war, but an invasion?" "Yes." "And American troops had invaded Mexico?" Ford could not remember, but thought the United States had enough soldiers to protect its borders. "I put out ads against preparedness without regard to Mexico," Ford said. "Didn't you say 'a man can steal from me and I will keep him, but if he goes to a training camp I will discharge him'?" "I know I never said that because we never discharged anybody."

Miss Julia Donovan, who for eight years has been chief clerk in the post-office at Pasco, has resigned to accept a position with the Northern Pacific at Seattle. A logger at Hoquiam, Wash., made complaint to the police that while a gypsy fortune teller held his hand to read his palm she took his watch and $20. Figures published by the Carranza government show that Mexico's debt is $184,000,000.

Tea must be good on the bush before you can make it good in the cup. Common tea is made from the rank coarse leaves of the tea-plant and is full of tannin. Schilling Tea is made from the young tender leaves and is full of tea-flavor. Schilling Tea costs more per pound, but less per cup.

and the towns are threatened from three sides. Strong winds are rapidly increasing the danger, and a number of ranches thought safe yesterday are now almost certain of destruction. A heavy livestock loss is reported.

Scarcity of available men to fight the flames is a serious handicap. The advisability of asking soldiers to assist in the work is being considered.

Boise Sends Aid.
Boise, Idaho, July 18.—In answer to the appeal from federal and state officials crews of men were loaded into big army automobile trucks and started for the scene of the raging forest fires in the yellow pine district in west central Idaho. It is hoped 100 additional fire fighters will reach the burning zone during today. The campaign will be to keep the fires out of valuable timber in the forest reserves. At present it is confined to public lands not with reserves.

R. E. Huffman, field agent with the general land office, left Casado for the scene of the fire. Other parties are heading into the Thunder mountain country from several directions. This fire is burning on a 13 miles front, 10 miles wide. An area 30 miles long and 14 miles wide has been burned over during the past two weeks. A new fire has started in the Yellow Jacket section and looks dangerous.

Government to Aid.
The state is furnishing the equipment to the army fire fighters. Fear is expressed that Idaho may see another duplication of the disastrous fires in 1910 which started across numerous small fires and caused $22,000,000 loss to timber and cost the government a million dollars in control work expense.

Governor Davis was able to get prompt relief from Secretary Lane to set aside $40,000 to be used to equip fire fighters and send them to the burning area. He leaves for Washington today to urge the government to put forth every effort to meet the forest fire situation in this state.

LIVELY TILTS

"You and an attorney are trying to get me to say what you want," Ford parried.

"But you said you were—you said you didn't know much about military affairs."

"I said I knew something about it."

"But you did not know what a million army was."

Attorneys here sought to protect the manufacturer by declaring the "knowledge" was not his but that of an "agent."

"It was not put in the agent's name," said Judge Tucker.

"Did not you try to oppose the preparedness program of congress?"

"Not wilfully," Ford answered.

"The government has a right to take the Ford resources," Attorney Stevenson read from the Tribune editorial.

"Anything in that about bomb throwing or overthrowing the government?" asked Stevenson. "What's bad about that?"

"That part which says the government can take resources is not common sense," Ford answered.

"Have you not said the only way to raise an army was by conscription?"

"That's a fair way when we are at war."

Stevenson resumed reading: "He takes the man that stands between him and universal service and penalizes him."

"What about that?" asked the attorney.

"That's against me."

"Did you discourage men going to service?"

"I did not."

"But you started an educational campaign to keep your men from going into service?"

"No. The only way I can do anything is by hiring a good expert. I thought I had a good one in Delaware."

Stevenson read a statement of President Wilson that the army was too small for routine peace duties and that
