SOCIETY

By GERTRUDE ROBINSON

The woman's division of the federal employment service is registering 600 women and girls to harvest the biggest bean crop Oregon has ever had. A tent city is being erected at Clatskanie where 300 helpers are needed. Scows will be placed on the river and thus the girls will have bathing facilities at the end of their day's work. Pickers are also in demand in Salem. Cranberry pickers at Astoria are another need of the hour.

Evidently women's usefulness along these lines did not close with the war, as a great many persons supposed they would.

Girls and young women who have been wondering—and worrying—a little—over war brides, (particularly those of the French variety) will be interested in the following news report sent out by the committee on publicity and education of the war work council of the Y. W. C. A.:

Maude Corbett came into North Adams, Michigan, the other day wearing the overseas blue uniform of the Y. W. C. A. She is in Michigan for a summer's rest after more than a year's service in France.

The last four months of her stay she was at Brest in charge of the Y. W. C. A. hostess house. This house was used almost entirely as the home and official headquarters for French brides of American soldiers, while they waited sailing.

"We had all kinds of peeks into life during my stay there," said Miss Corbett the other day.

"One night a young French girl who could speak almost no English came to us and explained that she had just arrived in the city from Marseilles and although she had been hunting for hours had found no place to stay. Brest is always terribly crowded. It was then nearly midnight. We were pretty well crowded ourselves, but we could always make more room somehow, so of course we took her in."

"She had known her husband only a few weeks when they were married. 'Of course it was a short time, and I never would have married a Frenchman with so short a courtship,' she told us, 'but Americans are different. They are all so trustworthy and good.'"

"Then there was another bride whose marriage was the culmination of a seven years' engagement during all of which time she had never seen her fiancé. The man was of French extraction and the engagement had been arranged in European fashion between his parents in America and hers in France. Then Uncle Sam gave him the unexpected invitation to visit France and they were married. She has a sister living in Canada and she expected to be a next door neighbor to her and visit her week ends. We learned the bride's home was going to be in Tennessee. We had to get out a map of America and break it to her gradually that she would probably seldom see her sister."

"Experiences like this taught us the need for simple lessons in American geography. It is difficult for French people to visualize the great distances in our country because they have experienced nothing like it."

"While the girls were waiting we had English classes and tried to tell them, also, about the customs of America—anything in fact that would help them familiarize themselves with the new country to which they were going. For many of them United States was utterly strange. Most of them didn't even know the language. It takes a great faith and real courage for these girls to leave home and come all this distance."

The Tuesday afternoon club of the Order of the Eastern Star will be entertained next Tuesday at the home of Mrs. George H. Burnett, 385 North High street. These afternoon meetings are always looked forward to with a great deal of pleasure, and an enjoyable time is always assured. Mrs. E. M. La Fore is in charge of the program.

Mr. and Mrs. Paul H. Hauser and two children, Paul Jr. and Margaret, leave tomorrow for a few days outing at Cascadia. Both Mr. and Mrs. Hauser are enthusiastic over the art of fishing and although, as Henry Van Dyke says, "here's an affair of luck," they are usually sure of a good catch at this place.

Mr. and Mrs. J. G. Connell of Santa Monica, and Miss Jessie Harbison of Pittsburg, have left for California after visiting at the John W. Harbison residence. The numerous friends they made during their short stay in Salem are regretting their departure.

Mr. and Mrs. J. V. Beach of Alexandria Court in Portland, are spending the summer at their beautiful country place in the Waldo hills near Salem. They had as their guests over the week end, Mr. and Mrs. Varnel D. C. Beach.

Among the numerous out of town persons visiting in the capital city during the summer season are Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Mathis of Corvallis, guests at the home of the former's brother, Dr. J. O. Mathis.

Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Walton are expecting their son, Lieutenant Fremont W. Walton, who has just returned from overseas service, as their guest in the near future.

Maude Becker has for her guests over the week end, Miss Eunice Collins of Tacoma, Washington, and Miss Irene French of Portland.

Mrs. E. S. Lamport has returned from a five months' stay in San Francisco, where she went to meet her son, Lieutenant Merrill S. Lamport.

After an enjoyable visit in Vancouver, B. C., and a short stay in Portland, Mrs. A. Kline and Miss Elsie McCoy have returned home.

Mrs. John East of Everett, Washington, has returned to her home after visiting in Salem at the home of her daughter, Mrs. J. C. Dege.

Miss Caroline Shearer of Portland is spending several days in Salem on a combined business and pleasure trip.

Miss Margaret McMahon and Miss Caroline East have returned from a visit with relatives in Portland.

An interesting visitor in the city is Mrs. F. E. Merrill of Minneapolis, who is a guest at the T. B. Kay home.

Mr. and Mrs. Allan Rynon (Florence Hofer) have returned from a brief visit with friends in Astoria.

Guests at the R. C. Barfield Jr. home are Mr. Barfield's parents, Mr. and Mrs. R. C. Barfield Sr., of Beville, Texas.

Mrs. C. P. Bishop is entertaining as her guest, her nephew, Kingsley Roberts of Hood River.

In his remark, pulled off his cap and asked the audience to stand at attention until the number was finished.

Along with Private Peat, the evening program was filled up with one of the most delightful ingenious bits of impersonation and musical comedy ever brought to Salem, presented by the two Regniers.

Tonight the chautauque season winds up with one of its most notable features—the finely illustrated lecture by Henry Warren Poor on the closing days of the war. The lecturer has traveled extensively through the war zone and has brought back a superb collection of stereoscopic slides. The entertainment features of the evening is the Apollo Concert company with their famous saxophone quartet and a series of readings and vocal solos.

WEST SALEM

(Capital Journal Special Service.)
West Salem, Or., July 2.—Mr. and Mrs. Guy Nicols and little daughter, Marjorie, were week-end guests at the home of his aunt, Mrs. Edwin Brock. The Nicols were in the way to their home in Portland after visiting in several California cities.

Mrs. Harry Fennell of Marion was a Sunday visitor at the home of Mrs. Jos. Fennell, who is still ill in bed.

Arthur Moore and wife are living on the Tobin place now owned by Albert Ruge.

Mrs. Eugene Cade, son and daughter of Aberdeen, Washington, are house guests at the D. Cade home.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Linegar, daughter and son-in-law of the Cades, have bought a farm near Mouthout and propose moving there in a few days.

Miss Mildred Douglas has returned from a ten days' vacation spent in southern Oregon.

Misses Ruth Bedford, Alice Wood and Blanch Gibson are attending chautauque in Salem.

Miss Alice Page, who holds a position in an eastern university, has been calling on friends in Kingswood Park. J. R. Bedford has finished cutting a fine field of wheat and another of oats.

Mr. and Mrs. Kimball are among those attending chautauque.

Miss Marian Fennell of Marion has been the guest of her aunt, Mrs. Joseph Fennell.

Good Evening

I have a few interesting things to tell you:

I buy all my clothes at Bishop's and you can see how neat I look, and say how good it does seem to get into a Virgin Wool Suit—one that you know will look well and keep its shape even after a hard day's wear.

And say, Bishop handles only the very best of everything—he has a reputation for that, there is no chance of getting poor material here.

Bishop's Tailored Ready Clothes

Are here in the waist seam in single and double breasted models.
