Prof. J. C. Nelson, principal of the Salem high school, spends most of his summer vacation in botanizing. He has just returned from a week of wandering up on the hills around Oswego looking for rare plants and next week will go to Newberg. On Parrott mountain he found a specimen of the plant "Clarkia" one of the evening primrose family, which has never before been reported by botanists as growing in the Willamette valley.

Mr. and Mrs. Z. J. Riggs are home from an automobile tour of California extending as far south as Los Angeles. They left Salem June 8 and since that time have been traveling around the state of California visiting Los Angeles, San Francisco, Sacramento, Yose-mite National park, Lake Tahoe and up in the mountains about 50 miles west of Redding.

INSURANCE CASE IS DECIDED BY COURT

A list of seven opinions was handed down this morning from the supreme court. One of these is of special interest as dealing with the relations of an insurance company to its agents. This is the case of A. H. Hinkson vs. Kansas City life insurance company, appealed from Lane county, Hon. F. P. Sigworth, judge. The opinion is by Justice Johns. The evidence shows that the plaintiff took out 4 different policies with the insurance company, dealing with its general agent, L. V. Rawlings. The transactions covered a period of years, and in each case the plaintiff made one or two payments on the premium and then gave the agent his note to cover subsequent payments, which notes were in several instances granted to extension. Each one of the four policies were cancelled one after the other on the ground of non-payment of premium. The testimony showed, however, that Rawlings, as the authorized agent of the company, voluntarily waived certain stipulations and restrictions of the policies. The plaintiff shows that he offered to surrender his policy in demanding the return of his money, but was refused any consideration on the ground of forfeiture for nonpayment. The case was taken into circuit court and a jury gave judgment to the plaintiff in the sum of about $5500. The defendant company appealed, alleging in their brief 42 different points of error in the lower court. The central point in their appeal was that Rawlings acted without authority in waiving stipulations, payment, and especially in granting extensions.

Justice Johns, analyzing the case, notes a peculiar situation, in that while the defendant company had upon its books the record of the transactions with Rawlings in issuing two of the policies, it had no direct communications whatever with the plaintiff and it was not until nearly five years after the first policy was issued that they sent to the plaintiff a circular letter informing him that they had discontinued the payment of premiums through the Portland office. The justice points to the fact that the company had knowledge of a part of the dealings of Rawlings with Hinkson, and holds that if these actions were ratified they were bound to abide by all the dealings. They could not accept what was to their advantage and reject what was not. On the ground that the plaintiff dealt with the general agent in good faith, and that the company had opportunity to know of the actions of their agent, if they actually did not, Justice Johns holds that the judgment of the lower court should be affirmed.

Other opinions handed down today were as follows:

J. G. Houck vs. Hilda A. C. Houck, et al., appellants; appeal from Josephine county, controversy over title to property. Opinion by Justice Johns. Judge F. M. Callkins reversed.

C. L. Newman vs. Multnomah Fuel company, appellants; appeal from Multnomah county; suit alleging breach of contract. Opinion by Justice Johns. Judge C. U. Gantenbein affirmed.

John J. Smith vs. J. R. Heath, et al., appellants; appeal from Columbia county; suit to have a deed declared a mortgage. Opinion by Justice Bean. Judge James A. Eakin affirmed.

Bell Nickel, appellant, vs. Elsie May Terrill, et al.; appeal from Jackson county; appeal from judgment of non-suit in action to recover on promissory note. Opinion by Justice Harris. Judge F. M. Callkins affirmed.

A. G. Spexarth, appellant, vs. W. A. Sherman as county treasurer of Clatsop county; appeal from Clatsop county; suit to restrain treasurer from collecting penalty upon taxes. Opinion by Chief Justice McBride. Judge J. A. Eakin affirmed.

Lee McCracken vs. Bay City Land company, appellants; appeal from Tillamook county; suit to rescind contract for the purchase of lot in Central addition to Bay City. Opinion by Justice Benson. Judge George R. Bagley reversed.

Petition for releasing denied in case of Saling vs. First National Bank.

Frank W. Barton who has just returned from France after two years of service, arrived in the city last evening for a visit with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Barton, residing on a ranch a few miles out from Salem. Mr. Barton, whose home is in Portland was formerly on the staff of the Oregonian. He went to France with a corps of railway engineers, but on discovering his journalistic ability he was put on the staff of the "Stars and Stripes"—the official organ of the American forces, and continued with the publication until he was discharged from the service. Mr. Barton is undoubtedly as savvy a man as any member of the American forces, but the records show that within a few months after his arrival in France he was caught off his guard "surrounded" and taken prisoner single handed by a pretty, petite maid of Loumont, armed only with an alluring smile. They were married soon after and she accompanied him on his visit to Salem.

Capt. Walter L. Toome Jr., arrived in the city this morning, stopping off on his way from Newport to Portland for a brief visit with his relatives and friends. He recently arrived in Oregon from the east, where he was recently discharged after 26 months of service. Much of this time was as an instructor in eastern training schools, having enlisted in the 91st division along with his brothers.

BOLSHEVISM LOSING GROUND IN BRITAIN

London.—(By mail).—Radical fanaticism, or what is better known as bolshevism, is quieting down in Britain. Here and there outbreaks continue, but they are only spasmodic, and the general opinion is that any danger of an overthrow of the government except by constitutional means is unlikely.

Britain's success in combating the radicals, is credited here to the moderate manner with which the radicals were dealt with. Only once or twice was it necessary to threaten armed force and this threat did not materialize.

"Give them plenty of rope and they will hang themselves," was the attitude taken towards the extremists, with the result that the plain citizens of Britain today exhibits little sympathy with radicalism.

Though meetings were held at which extremists of the most radical type made fervent speeches to hush liberal element to violence. They did help to speed labor to an awakening of its power with the result that all over the United Kingdom men and women today are earning higher wages and working shorter hours.

Through radicalism, as represented in an effort to foster a revolution, has quieted, the government still has to deal with the worker. His vast power was shown to him when the government practically surrendered to the British miners in face of a strike of the miners, railwaymen and transport workers.

Such extremists as Ramsay MacDonald and Mrs. Philip Snowden are still active. George Bernard Shaw, the famous novelist, continues contributing his support by his ever humorous quips and semi serious remarks. George Lansbury is editing the London Daily Herald, Britain's labor organ, and Arthur Henderson, secretary of the labor party, is helping Lloyd George on the labor problems at the peace conference. All these, however, are constitutional radicals.

The only out and out announced bolshevik leader, Billy Watson, has been quiet for several months. The last time he was in the public spotlight was when the police arrested him for speaking. Several others of his supporters were rounded up and either deported or locked up.

Trafalgar Square, the great mecca for soap box orators, still "carries on," but a "Bolsky" (London policeman) stands by to see that there is no disorder.

Efforts to minimize the police have relaxed temporarily. This was due to the government's offer to increase pay, a semi-recognition of the men's right to present their side of a grievance, and the unshaking determination of the government to utilize several thousand willing discharged soldiers and sailors as strike breakers.

DIRECTORS OF WAR CAMP
COMMUNITY SERVICE TO HOLD MEETING TONIGHT

Directors of the war camp community service will meet this evening at the Commercial club for a general report from John W. Todd, secretary and treasurer and for a discussion of plans for the summer and winter.

It is probable that the community service, organized by the government to help soldiers will arrange for a special flag service to be held at one of the churches along with a community sing. Another plan of the service, will be that of arranging a special program for labor day, the first Monday in September and some kind of a special service during state fair week.

The dance given for the returned soldiers last week under the auspices of the War Camp Community Service was regarded as such a success in every way that it is probable another will be held during the season. Out of the 380 soldiers, sailors and marines who are home from the service in Marion county, about 125 accepted the invitation.

The general committee to meet this evening include the following: John W. Todd, secretary, R. O. Snelling, Paul Wallace, Joseph H. Albert, T. R. Kay, Judge W. M. Bushey, H. W. Meyers, W. H. Dancy, Rev. R. N. Avison, Mrs. John Carson, Mrs. R. J. Hendricks, Mrs. F. A. Elliott and Miss Cordelia Marvin.

The War Camp Community Service was one of the seven organizations for which money was raised several months before the close of the war. With the early close of the war, there was money left in the treasury of this service and it is now being apportioned out to counties in proportion to the number of soldiers in the service. The apportionment for Marion county to be used in aiding the soldier is about $1,000.

Smith Says Lumbermen
Making Large Profits

Portland, Or., July 29.—C. A. Smith's efforts to obtain an order from the federal court by which the receivers of the C. A. Smith company will permit him to operate one of the company's mill began in the federal court yesterday before Judge Wolverton. There are two mills at Coos Bay, the smaller one now being operated, but the larger is shut down and rusting. The property has been foreclosed and in the hands of receivers, and ordered sold December 1, 1919. There is a year for redemption.

Mr. Smith desires a lease on the large mill up to the period of redemption and he offers as compensation for the lease the cost of operation plus 25 per cent. The court was informed that material can be produced and delivered at Marsh field for $12 a thousand feet. The market price of lumber is now much higher than that and is still mounting, the future of the lumber business being bright. The $12 a thousand cost includes extensions necessary for the railroad to Powers to tap new timber and it also includes the top price for labor. J. H. Powers, who has spent a lifetime in logging and the railroad end of the lumber business, was on the witness stand yesterday afternoon and told in detail the items taken into consideration in making up the cost of $12 per thousand at Marshfield.

The equipment of the big mill, one of the largest in Oregon, is idle and Mr. Powers testified that it is his experience that boilers and engines depreciate faster when not in use than when being operated. Either the receivers or the lessees could operate the plant at a big profit, declared Mr. Powers.
