American Soldier-Students Marrying Many English Girls

London—(By mail)—American soldier students at British universities are doing something else besides studying. They are negotiating—entangling—alliances between U. S. male citizens and the gentler sex of Britain. In other words, they are marrying English, Scotch, Irish and Welsh girls wherever they happen to be quartered by the army educational authorities.
According to the "American Soldier-Student," the organ of the student detachment of the U. S. Army in Great Britain, ten marriages with British girls have occurred among the detachment at University College, London, while other detachments at Oxford, Cambridge, and elsewhere are not very far behind. There are between six and seven hundred American students in London, and Edinburgh has nearly as many. Nine weddings are reported from Edinburgh, and there is hardly a town in which students have spent the last three months that cannot report an Anglo-American wedding.

Dallas Aviation Officer Arrives From France

(Capital Journal Special Service.)
Dallas, Ore., Aug. 9.—First Lt. Steele Evans of Uncle Sam's aviation service arrived in Dallas, Monday for a short visit at the home of his mother Mrs. Fred Talbott on Washington street.
Lt. Evans has been in service in France for the past 18 months having left this country as a member of a Portland company of the Third Oregon. He was transferred to the aviation section shortly after his arrival in France and after a course of severe training was attached to a French bombing squadron which operated in the decaus of Verdun, and a number of other prominent cities in the northeastern part of France, where he saw continuous service until the close of the war.
Lieutenant Evans was injured in a fall with a plane in France a few months ago and is still under a physician's orders. He has to report to the government hospital in San Francisco about the 15th of the month next, which he will probably be given his discharge.
Lieutenant Evans has many interesting experiences to tell about the fighting in the air in the battle zone, he having seen more service than probably any other Polk county boy in the air service.

have thought that his parents would not assist him, is known for the sudden disappearance of the boy. While at the Bondevelt home his department was reported as very good. While there he expressed his intention of finding some place where he could work his way through school during the coming winter.
That the boy is mistaken in his idea that he cannot get an education at home is evidenced by the announcement of his father that if his son will return he can have all of the advantages of a high school course in his home town. Desire to know that the boy is safe and in good health is the chief reason Mr. and Mrs. Zeiner have in offering the reward for information as to their son's whereabouts. They state that if he will let them know where he is, but does not wish to return home, they will not compel him to do so.
