Requirements For Service As Missionary Are Strict

The requirements for missionary service in South America are greater than those demanded of the consular service, and it is easier to become an officer in the army or navy than to qualify as a church missionary, declared George L. Cooper, former U. S. vice consul to Peru Sunday morning at the First Christian church.

Mr. Cooper, who originally hails from Lincoln, Neb., the home of William J. Bryan, has recently completed four years as vice consul to Peru. He is now located in Salem.

While the Christian church had no missionaries in Peru, he said that the Methodist church was well represented and that its missionaries were doing good work teaching our ways of doing and especially making the younger generation familiar with the English language.

Missionaries are good investments from the standpoint of business, Mr. Cooper claimed. Great Britain recognizes this and, as he said, was one of the greatest exporters of missionaries of any country in the world. The English missionary paved the way for English commerce and was doing much to make the English language universal. It is the English speaking missionary in South America that is laying the foundation for future trade, Mr. Cooper claimed.

The work of a missionary in Peru is the same as that of a missionary anywhere, that of teaching the gospel, the English language, art, music and American customs. The American school at Lima, the capital of Peru, is known as the American high school. He asserted that 4000 students from South America were either studying under missionaries or were already attending colleges in the United States.

The term of a missionary going to foreign parts, Mr. Cooper said, was for six years and generally longer. As a result, the missionary often experienced the feeling of homesickness more than those in the consular service, as the consular service man could come home oftener and his term of service was generally shorter. The caste system prevails as much in Peru as in India, Mr. Cooper said.

retain, and I am not so sure that such a plan would be the safest and best plan to adopt."

The Keayon bill, in addition to proposing strict regulations of big packers, opens the way for starting cooperative packing houses and cold storage plants of a local nature.

Any municipality or local organization is authorized to set up its own slaughtering and storage houses and the secretary of agriculture is ordered by the bill to give every assistance and advice.

This section was included on suggestion of former Congressman William M. Keat, California, as a proposal to bring the cattle grower and the city meat eater closer together.

Another section calls for receiverhip in the public interest when a packer violates the rigid license under which he would operate. The secretary of agriculture under this section could commandeer a plant, operate it for the public benefit allow the packers to seek redress in court where he would have an opportunity to air his case fully. The measure is the joint product of long conference by the federal trade commission, following its exhaustive investigation of the packing industry, the National Consumers league, farmers organizations and various senators and members of congress. Packers will center their efforts on obtaining radical modification of the bill in the senate committee where they hope to have a milder measure substituted.

Enormous profits are taken out before the figures appearing in advertisements are arrived at," Colver said.

Profits from ownership of stockyards run into millions of dollars, Colver declared. Control of stockyards and refrigerator cars are the basis of the great advantage the big packers have over their smaller competitors, he asserted.

Refrigerator cars are part of the equipment of the common carriers and should not be owned by the dominant factors in the business they are supposed to serve," Colver declared today.

"We found the five great meat packing corporations control the meat packing industry of the country," declared Colver, referring to the commission's investigation of the packing business.

There are many independent packers, he said, but they exist on sufferance.

"These bills are immeasurably useful, as being the foundation for the inquiry about to begin," Colver said. He then reviewed the results of the trade commission's investigations.

"We found a livestock pool," he declared. "If the supply of animals is purchased on a percentage basis, there can't be competition any time after that."

"They may stage a show of competition but there cannot be a struggle for business as to volume when the amount of the commodity to be sold is to be regulated on a percentage basis."

The five big packers are taking millions of dollars in hidden profits through ownership of stockyards, William B. Colver of the federal trade commission told the committee.

Enormous profits of packer controlled stockyards, including feeding charges and pen rent, roll into coffers of the big packers before the cattle reach the slaughter houses, he explained.

Packers fail to include these earnings in statements showing one cent a pound profit on meat, Colver declared, this figure being based only on the gross price paid to livestock men for their cattle. Profits on packer owned cattle loan banks are also silently reaped by the "big five," he stated.

MRS. LEWIS OF BROOKLYN

Tells How She Was Made Well by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Brooklyn, N. Y.—"For one year I was miserable from a displacement, which caused a general run-down condition with headaches and pains in my side. My sister induced me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I found it helped me very much and such a splendid tonic that I am recommending it to any woman who has similar troubles."

—Mrs. ELLEN G. LEWIS, 30 Vernon Ave., Brooklyn, N. Y.

Such conditions as Mrs. Lewis suffered from may be caused by a fall or a general weakened run-down condition of the system, and the most successful remedy to restore strength to muscles and tissue and bring about a normal healthy condition—has proved to be this famous root and herb medicine, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

If you have disturbing symptoms you do not understand write Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass. The result of their 20 years experience is at your service.

This is the basis of the advantage large packers have over smaller competitors, Colver explained.

Profits cannot be eliminated on the basis of a pound of meat, because meat can be sold at a loss and the business be profitable."
