And now comes the official report of the publications devoted to the dry goods business, that prices are about stabilized and that buyers are refusing to pay the inflated values. This does not mean lower prices in drygoods this fall, a drygoods man explained, as about all the buying for fall and winter business has been at the recent high prices wholesale and at present several lines of drygoods are being sold under the wholesale market.

The oat shipping market did a little skittering last week and a number of farmers succeeded in disposing of their crops for $1 a bushel and in a few instances, as high as $1.02 a bushel. But it is all over now as the market has dropped to a normal condition and quotations today are 86 cents, a drop of 14 cents a bushel since last Friday. The local price was so high that it was found that oats from the east could be shipped in at a lower figure. Hence the drop.

Resolutions opposing the calling of the legislature were passed at the meeting of the Salem orange last Saturday, and were forwarded to Governor Oletto. The farmers expressed themselves as being willing that the legislature should be called if it was necessary for the vote of Oregon to ratify the amendment to the constitution of the United States providing for woman suffrage. The vote of the Salem orange passing the resolution was taken before Governor Oletto had made known official-ly his stand on the question.

Bishop says wear summer shoes now and winter shoes later.

The first week in September will include two days for observance, Monday Sept. 1 is labor day and a legal holiday as well. Lots in Pacific addition to the town of Astoria do not come very high. In the will of A. Jessup Strang, 19 lots in this addition to Astoria were willed to DeMolay Commandery No. 5, of Salem. The county clerk had just received the appraisal from the county court of Clatsop county and the lots are valued at $5 each, with a total valuation of $95. The trustees named by Mr. Strang in his will were given authority to sell and convey the lots and to invest the sum, along with other proceeds from valuable lots in Portland and Milwaukie.

Sometimes it pays to take a chance and advertise for a lost purse. Karline Rice lost a little purse a few days ago, and City Treasurer Rice took a chance in spending 15 cents in the Capital Journal's "new today." The purse was returned late Saturday evening to the treasurer's office. A man happened to find it near the Court apartments and he also happened to be a reader of the Capital Journal.

The farmers living within a few miles of Mt. Angel are clamoring for electric service and already several lines are under consideration. Arrangements have already been made for the extending of electric service from Mt. Angel southeast of the city to the Kruse and May homes and on another line, running southeast of Mt. Angel past the rock crusher to the Lueber, Mollenbier and Chas. Walker homes.

At the regular meeting of the board of directors of the Y. M. C. A. held last Saturday afternoon, Rev. James Elvin, former pastor of the First Congregational church in Salem, and a well known association worker, was unanimously elected as secretary of the local association his salary being fixed at $200 a month. Early in the war Mr. Elvin resigned his pastorate to join the Y. M. C. A. forces in France, where he proved a most efficient worker. On returning to America he was engaged in the national campaign for the raising of funds for the association, and has also taken an active part in the campaigns in Salem. From this past experience, as well as his work in the ministry and his extensive travel, he is eminently fitted for the local position and will contribute greatly to both city and county work.
