COURT BAILIFF SPRINGS SURPRISE BY REVERSING STORY IN LIQUOR TRIAL

Seattle, Wash., Sept. 3.—Joseph Hensman, a court bailiff, caused a sensation this morning in Judge Everett Smith's court room when, according to Deputy Prosecuting Attorney Patterson, he told a different story of the liquor thefts at the county-city building on the night of June 3, than he related to the grand jury.

counsel for Judge Allen, who is accused of unlawful possession of five quarts of Scotch whiskey, protested against what he termed Patterson's "badgering of the witness."

ty, he asserted, enumerating the traffic in opium, in arms, and in women and children by unscrupulous employers, which is regulated by the labor clauses. "That's the treaty," he said, holding out his hands, palms upward in a gesture of revelation; "that's the treaty, did you ever hear of it before? Were you ever told what was in it?"

"If I couldn't have brought back the kind of treaty I brought back, I wouldn't have come back, because I would have been an unfaithful servant."

There is now, in Germany, an "awakened conscience" of the iniquity of the crime the German government attempted, Wilson said.

He declared that if the best that can be done is not done to permanently end war now, the nation's word to the families of the American soldiers would be broken, as these soldiers were called to fight to end war forever.

emerged from the hall. People surged around his car while soldiers, police and Boy Scouts sought to hold them back.

WARM WELCOMES GIVEN CHIEF BY "PLAIN FOLK"

On Board the President's Train, Nearing Columbus, Sept. 4.—President Wilson, invading the west in his campaign for unamended ratification of the peace treaty, came in contact with "plain folks" at Dennison, Ohio, today for the first time on his trip.

Wilson was on the observation platform of his private car when the special halted to change engines and a crowd of thirty or forty people gathered to greet him.

Handshaking started when an old man stepped up, and gripping the president's hand, said:

"I wish you success on your journey, Mr. Wilson. I lost two sons in the war; only got one left, and I want things fixed up so I won't have to lose him."

There was a spattering of applause at this and the people pressed forward to shake hands.

The private car had stopped beside a Red Cross canteen and a number of Red Cross workers came out. Wilson asked them if they were still meeting troop trains, and said he wished he could remain a while to help them welcome a troop train, due shortly, and also expressed regret that he was unable to stay in the east to welcome General Pershing.

The president's manner was cordial and those who saw him found he did not fit into the idea of an aloof, chilly individual.

Third term talk apparently got a blow in a bit of repartee between Wilson and one of the men in the crowd.

"Dennison voted against you last time, but we'll vote for you in 1920," he shouted.

The president laughed and shook his head. "Oh, no," said he.

The exact time to be spent by Wilson in California cities, still is indefinite, but it was learned he probably will remain two days in San Francisco, two in Los Angeles and make an overnight stay in San Diego.

PRESIDENT IN BEST OF SPIRITS; HEALTH GOOD

By Hugh Ballie
Aboard the President's Train, Pittsburg, Pa., Sept. 4.—President Wilson today embarked upon his supreme effort to force the peace treaty through the senate unamended.

Approaching Columbus, Ohio, where his first appeal direct to the people was to be made, the president, in his private car, the Mayflower, roughly outlined the points he desired to emphasize in his keynote address.

Wilson manifested a gay, light hearted mood as he set out on his long journey. He waved and smiled greetings to occasional crowds gathered at small stations to see his train go by and his manner was sprightly.

At Baltimore, the Red Cross nurses who had been distributing cigarette and chocolate to soldiers on a troop train, clustered about the observation platform of his car and offered him a lunch. The president, however, declined with thanks, saying he had just finished dinner and "I'm about filled up."

At several stations women were on hand with flowers.

Dr. Grayson, the president's physician, said his health was excellent and that he was in good trim for the strain of making one or two speeches a day for nearly a month. His voice will be given constant attention by Dr. Grayson. The president retired early last night, as he wanted to be up early this morning to get his speech into shape. Considerable executive business may be transacted on the trip.

While on the road Wilson will make preparations for the economic conference of capital and labor and the agricultural interests to convene in Washington soon after his return, and will announce the names of delegates thereto.

Columbus Is Gay.
Columbus, Ohio, Sept. 4.—(United Press.)—Columbus was all spruced up for President Wilson's brief visit today.

Five airplanes left for Newark, Ohio, where the presidential train will be met and escorted to the state capital.

Governor Cox will head a delegation to receive the president. The train is due at 11 o'clock. There will be a parade, lasting probably a half hour. Wilson is scheduled to begin his address at 11:30 (Central time) and talk for an hour.

At 1 o'clock the presidential party is scheduled to leave for Indianapolis, where President Wilson will talk this evening.

ROAD CONSTRUCTION TO BE SHOWN AT FAIR

Government Displays Show Importance Of Proper Maintenance.

Methods of road maintenance will be an important part of the displays of the bureau of public roads, United States department of agriculture, in the combined government exhibits at the state fair this year.

War's demands placed a big, new burden upon the highways of the United States. Not only are great fleets of Army trucks still thundering over the roads near military posts and cantonments, but increasing numbers of commercial trucks and horse-drawn vehicles are carrying farm products to markets, and are transporting merchandise of every description from the city to the country and from one city to another.

All this means that to prevent the roads from becoming rutted, crumpled and shattered and at length impassable under their burdens, the greatest attention must be paid to their maintenance.

The bureau of public roads is the agency that, with its other duties administers the federal aid road act, believed to be the greatest stimulus to road building in American history. A great program of highway construction, in which the federal government cooperates with the states, is now under way.

Its displays will not only demonstrate maintenance, but the tested methods of providing drainage and foundations and how to build earth, gravel, sand-clay, brick and concrete roads.

FIRE ON TEAL CREEK
(Capital Journal Special Service.)
Dallas, Or., Sept. 4.—A big forest fire, one of the worst ever experienced in that vicinity broke out early Tuesday in the Teal Creek county several miles southwest of Falls City and at a late hour was still burning fiercely taking everything in its path.

A rancher named Smith with his family are located on a tract of land that is in the path of the fire and fears are being entertained for their safety. A large force of men under the direction of District Fire Warden W. V. Fuller have been at work several hours endeavoring to stop the spread of the flames but Mr. Fuller states that owing to the extreme dry condition of the timber burning bark and other pieces of flaming wood is carried sometimes as far as half a mile setting out other fires which tax the efforts of the fighters to control.
