STEEVES TELLS OF AMERICA'S WONDERS

Doctor Voices See America First Plea To Methodist Church Audience.

The big audience that gathered in the First Methodist church last evening has a better idea of why one should "see America first" than they ever had before. Dr. B. L. Steeves, who in the past few years traveled over every section of the United States by train and auto filled up the latter part of the evening with a graphic and enlightening travelogue covering a journey of 12,000 miles. In the course of this trip he visited many of the spots in the south and east that have been made immortal by events of national history, and in course of his descriptions the doctor threw in flashes of historical light that served to visualize the scenes.

He stopped for a day at the Alamo at San Antonio, the scene of one of the bloodiest and most momentous battles ever fought. He wandered through the old section of New Orleans, where beauty and romance of a past age mingle with modern squalor and 37 varieties of smell. Almost as impressive as this city of the living was the cities of the dead, which are among the most beautiful in the world. He had experiences with southern and which combined comedy with tragedy. At several points he took several dummies, several mules and several dollars to free the auto from bottomless mud holes. He also had a good opportunity to study the negro in his own habitat.

Brief stops were made at the Tuskegee school for negroes, at the site of old Andersonville prison, where he drank from "Providence spring" at the home of Jefferson Davis and Robert E. Lee. A strenuous trip was made through the sands of Florida to old St. Augustine. On the way northward he visited many of the noted battlefields, including Gettysburg and Antietam, and spent several days among the historic buildings of Richmond and Williamsburg. All the important cities of the Atlantic states were visited, including Washington, and a trip to Mt. Vernon.

The journey northward ended at Quebec, where one of his most interesting experiences was a visit to the great shrine of St. Anne, where he was permitted the rare privilege of seeing and handling the priceless relics, supposed to have miraculous healing powers.

ADVICE ABOUT THE TEETH

(By Dr. E. R. Parker.)

If an extracted tooth is not replaced, the teeth next on each side, having lost their support, move toward each other, leaving crevices into which food particles pack and cause the loss of other teeth. Again when a tooth is missing for some time, say in the lower jaw, the opposite teeth in the upper jaw protrude because it has nothing to strike against when biting. This prevents proper mastication for when chewing, the upper and lower teeth should form a certain contact, and if out of their natural position, this true contact cannot be made. In other words the teeth do not fit upon each other.

The teeth, in connection with the roof of the mouth, form a sounding board which enables us to articulate certain sounds. Some sounds are made by the tongue pressing against the teeth. Teeth are just as much a part of the vocal equipment as the muscles of the throat and chest. Public speakers and singers realize this and the consequent necessity of keeping their teeth in perfect condition.

THREE DIE

Eight officers and 25 men of the crew it is reported were overcome by fumes. All wore gas masks.

The dead: William M. Savage, second class engineer; A. Hilario, mess attendant, third class; G. Dixon, mess attendant, third class.

The injured included: Lieutenant Commander P. L. Carroll, Lieutenant Commander G. J. McMillin, Lieutenant C. G. Halpine, Lieutenant F. J. Hanafree, Lieutenant E. B. Browne, Lieutenant C. H. Mills, Ensign R. W. Abbott and Ensign T. Wooten and a score of the men.

The fire started in a dynamo room from some unknown cause. The compartments were flooded to stop its progress.

Admiral Rodman, commanding the fleet was on shore. He said he would not issue a statement until he had made a careful examination.

Savage is reported to have died like a hero. He is said to have kept in telephone communication with officers while the waters crept about him, informing them of its progress, until he fell from the phone with a gasp.

The officer of the deck, who was on duty during the fire, said it started presumably from spontaneous combustion. He told of Savage's heroic action.

"An air duct in the bulkhead of the dynamo room," he said, "permitted flames and poisonous fumes to enter the ice machine room, where Savage, Hilario and Dixon were on watch.

"The compartments filled with fumes generated from burning photographic materials, and with water trickled into the compartments to extinguish the flames. Trapped in the ice machine room with his two assistants, Engineer Savage throughout his terrible ordeal kept in telephonic communication with the chief engineer.

"Speaking without a tremor, he reported from time to time how the water was rising and how they were being slowly strangled by the fumes and smoke.

"Then came the report that the water had reached a height of ten feet and here, trailing into weakness, the voice of the gallant Savage stopped, and noisier further was heard over the telephone."

The officer of the deck told of heroic but futile efforts to rescue the men and how the officers and men detailed for this work were themselves overcome by the fumes, when at last they opened the red hot, water-tight bulkhead.

These men had to be carried to safety by their comrades.

More than 2000 visitors were on the New Mexico when the fire started.

They left in perfect order when quietly told the visiting period was over.

SILVERTON NOTES

After 58 years a blacksmith, A. C. Steelhammer, has sold his shop to his son, Arthur, and will retire from business as soon as they can finish the rush orders which have accumulated during the busy season. He will be in the shop for some time yet to help his son.

Final preparations for the opening of school in Silverton were arranged at the regular meeting of the board on Tuesday evening. The date for beginning was set for Monday, September 29th. This is one week later than last year, but on account of the state fair and the gathering of fruit, it was thought best to place the date later.

Numerous friends of Miss Nellie Porter and Louis Robinson were greatly surprised Saturday evening when they returned to the city and introduced themselves as wife and husband. Mrs. Robinson is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Porter and the groom is a son of Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Robinson. Both of the parties are well known in Silverton.--Tribune.

attack the principle of a president getting such a precedent as arbitrarily sending an armed force into foreign territory because of a strictly international situation.

"What will make bolsheviks any quicker?" asked Senator Johnson, "than such a policy of sacrificing American lives in an undisclosed, undeclared war?"

In addition to speeches at Chicago, Indianapolis, St. Louis and Kansas City, previously announced, Johnson will speak at Des Moines, Sioux City and Minneapolis. If the situation in the senate does not make his return to Washington advisable, the senator will then continue to the coast, speaking in Spokane, Seattle, San Francisco and Los Angeles.

His first speech will be before the Hamilton club, Chicago, Wednesday noon. Johnson, Borah and McCormick will then speak at a night meeting. The senators will not have a special train or special car for the tour.

PRESIDENT TO MAKE

but that has no effect apparently on the warmth of his welcome. Many of the men on the Des Moines reception committee were republicans. Some of them said they were against Wilson personally, but favored ratification. They said "the cheers are not for Wilson; they are for the league of nations."

Wilson is continuing to make speeches entirely extemporaneous. They never are prepared or given out in advance. Therefore, the official text is delayed until the shorthand notes of the stenographers have been transcribed.
