Hiram B. Cooper, who went into the army shortly after he was married Aug. 11, 1917 (and who returned just short time ago, has filed suit for a divorce from his wife, Annabelle Cooper, alleging that her real name is Anna Belle Lott. In his complaint he alleges that the pretended marriage took place in Portland August 11, 1917, and that he believed that Annabelle Lott was a widow and capable of contracting a marriage. He alleges that she was a dutiful husband and that there are no children or property rights. That at the time of their attempted marriage, she was the lawful wife of Frank Lott and that therefore the marriage was void. That she claimed to him she had been divorced from Frank Lott and that he did not discover the real situation until about September 1, 1919. He asks for an absolute divorce.

Jack Lane, one of the delivery drivers for the People's Cash store, met with a very sudden and serious interruption on his way to lunch this noon. He was driving the empty auto delivery up State street and just in front of the supreme court building the two left side wheels landed in the trough of the street car rail, causing the truck to swerve dangerously. He slammed on the brake sharply to check it, and then released it, thinking the car would straighten out with the steering gear. But see he was headed straight for a telephone pole and the hospital, he jerked the brake on again and let the truck skid. Having on a set of very smooth tires, it swung around two or three times on the wet pavement and landed against the curb and the pole at the same time. The impact made a complete wreck of the rear wheels, almost doubling up the axle, and also smashed off the glass doors at the rear end. Lane escaped without injury as the vehicle did not turn over.

The administrator of the estate of Jacob P. Mihalch has reported to the county court that at the sale held Sept. 9 of personal property of the estate, the amount of $2315.80 was received. Included in this amount was the Federal truck, bid in by Roy Minch
