

I Don't Have To Worry Now!

THERE was a time when I worried over my baby, because he was so thin and pale. We were trying to feed him raw milk with water, because I couldn't nurse him—but it was too hard for his little stomach to digest.

"Isn't there some form of milk easier for him?" I asked my doctor. "Let's try Nestlé's Milk Food," he said. "That is just pure milk, you know, in powder form—but much easier to digest because the curds are broken up—and more nourishing because just the right amount of sugar and cereal is added."

Judge Kelly Undecided As To What Should Be Done With Young Robbers.

The big proposition of what to do with the eight men who have been charged with several robberies, wherein goods, valued from $300 to $250, have been taken from buildings, has been occupying the attention of Judge Percy Kelly and will take some of his time Wednesday of this week.

The two Cavanaugh boys, who broke their way into the Hartman jewelry store and helped themselves to property valued at $300, pleaded guilty and were paroled, although they have a sentence of three years in the penitentiary hanging over their heads should they again violate the law within three years.

Frank Solestino, who, like the Cavanaugh boys, came from Portland to do their night work, was captured in Portland Saturday and returned to Salem. He pleaded guilty and will come before Judge Kelly next Wednesday. With Joseph Mayer, he broke into the Salem Woolen Mills store and stole $900 worth of clothing and was getting away with it when seen by the police. His accomplice Joseph Mayer was captured by Solestino managed to get away. Mayer was sent back to the reform school.

The four young men who are charged with breaking into the Voder garage at Woodburn and stealing a Studebaker auto besides about $500 worth of supplies, are meeting different fates. One of the young men, Stabin, pleaded guilty of larceny only and not larceny from a building and was given three months in the county jail. Forstner also pleaded guilty to larceny, and was paroled with a year's sentence hanging over him.

The two other young men implicated in the Woodburn robbery will know their fate Wednesday. There is some doubt as to the age of one of the young men, Merchant. The fourth one, Wilson by name, has pleaded not guilty and his trial has been set for Wednesday of this week. It is alleged that the four youths broke into the Woodburn garage, and after committing the robbery in a building, took the tires and other supplies and hid them at Gladstone and then concealed the Studebaker car in a barn belonging to a friend living not far from Gladstone.

Dana Will Open Campaign Of Commercial Club For New Members With Speech

Marshall Dana, president of the Portland Ad club, will be in the city Tuesday evening to address the active membership boosters of the Salem Commercial club, preparatory to the membership drive to be put on for three days beginning Wednesday morning.

To bring together those who will take an active part in the drive, a luncheon will be given at the Marion hotel, at 6:30 o'clock and it is at this luncheon that Mr. Dana will deliver his address. It is understood that Mr. Dana is one of the five oratorical wires in Portland and that when he talks, he has something to say really worth while. And it was for this reason that he was selected to speak to the men who will have charge of the Commercial club membership campaign.

Sacramento, Cal., Sept. 15.—The congressional aircraft probe committee visited Sacramento today inspecting the field and the Liberty Iron works, where planes were built during the war.

A brief session of the committee was held immediately after breakfast at the Sutter club. Two planes built for the government at a cost of $6500 each were sold to the Christie Manufacturing company for $800 apiece, and later resold by that company for about $3500 each; it was testified to by Harry Wetzel, superintendent at the Liberty Iron works during the period of production. ### History of Number 40

40 years ago an old doctor was putting up a medicine for diseases of the blood, that cured the worst cases of specific blood poison, and time proved that the cures were permanent. After many years I secured the prescription (being a druggist), and took each ingredient separately and referred to my U. S. dispensatory and other authoritative books on medicine and found the medical properties set down as follows: "Employed in diseases of the glandular system, in blood poison, scrofula, eczema, constipation, stomach and liver troubles, chronic rheumatism, catarrh, in sores, ulcers, pimples, skin eruptions, mercurial and lead poisoning. Under its use nodes, tumors and serofulous swellings that have withstood all other treatment disappear as if by magic." To commemorate my fortieth year as a druggist I named this medicine "Number 40 for the blood." J. C. Mendenhall, Evansville, Ind. Sold by Schaefer's drug store.

Church to Meet Spirit of the New Age.

By WILLIAM HOSTER.

IS the Christianity of today the same as that of a century ago? Fundamentally, yes; in its expression and application, no. In what condition has religion emerged from the melting pot of the world war? Is there a meeting point between the Church and the militant civilization of the twentieth century? Has the Church kept abreast of the times?

In these post war days of unrest and uncertainty, when society is not quite sure which road to travel, has the Church assumed the leadership it is granted it should take? Is the Church appreciative of the responsibilities and obligations of the hour? These and questions of like import rise to the lips of every thoughtful man who views the successive religious movements which have been inaugurated recently, and which are typified by the Episcopal National-Wide Campaign, of which the Every Name Campaign in the Diocese of New York is its Metropolitan handmaiden. The fullness of time only can give the definite answers. Meanwhile, an array of significant facts is piling up for the consideration of the close observer of the times.

Unquestionably, all of these movements are the outgrowth of efforts on the part of the churches to meet the changed conditions which have resulted from the war. It is agreed that we have entered upon a new era in the world's history—with new duties, new responsibilities, a revised view-point and a clearer idea than ever before of man's dependence upon his fellow-man without regard to religion or race, color or class distinction.

Religion Must Be Practical. "In the new era which is upon us," writes George Gordon Lattle, a New York lawyer who has entered with fervor into the Every Name Campaign, "religion, to be effective, will have to shape itself to meet the wants of mankind as a whole. It must recognize human conditions, needs, aspirations, weakness. It must be practical. It must be efficient. It must cease to bodazzle the mind with metaphysical doctrines, creeds, theories and dogmas, and get down to common level."

Order of the Holy Cross, the Brotherhood of St. Andrew, and the Church Periodical Club. A nation-wide campaign of education is to be conducted in which is involved a personal call upon every member of the Church throughout the United States, in the effort to "inform the mind and awaken the conscience" of the church-goer as to the duties and responsibilities of members of the Episcopal Faith in the new era.

And what is of peculiar interest and importance, there will be taken simultaneously a survey of the resources of the Church and its institutions in every part of the world, which shall meet the personal call and that when the Triennial General Convention of the Church meets at Detroit in October there will be before the clerical and lay delegates a comprehensive picture of the entire church establishment.

Statesmanship Needed. With this in hand, it is then planned to map out a program of Church activity for the ensuing three years which shall meet the spirit of the new age and comport with the standing of the Episcopal Church as a National Institution. Finally, a budget system will be submitted, and with the Reconstruction program in hand, and a practical, business-like method of putting it into execution formulated, the reawakened, united and solidified Church will go before the nation for co-operation and support in its drive for national service.

It is a movement that calls for statesmanship of the highest order. Within the corporate body of the Episcopal Church are all of the conflicting elements which represent the seething life of America today. Governed by a body of laws closely conforming to the Constitution of the United States, the utmost liberty of thought and speech are permitted consonant with adherence to the fundamental religious doctrines of the Church; and a mass of conflicting views will have to be reconciled in shaping a general program for action upon which the Triennial Convention can agree to go before the country.

Rev. R. Blund Mitchell

Rev. Daniel S. Tuttle of St. Louis, Presiding Bishop of the Church, and behind whom is an efficient Executive Campaign Committee composed of the Rt. Rev. Arthur S. Lloyd, D. D., Chairman; the Rev. Dr. Robert W. Patton, National Director; the Rev. L. G. Wood, Vice Director; the Rev. R. Blund Mitchell, Manager Central Office; Miss Grace Lindley, the Rev. Dr. William E. Gardner, and the Rev. Augustine Elmendorf. Back of this committee are committees representing every diocese and missionary district in the nation, and still behind them parish committees representing every parish organization. The educational campaign and the survey are proceeding along side by side with precision and a care and attention to detail that is not exceeded by that which is put into the conduct of a great national political campaign, and, it may be added, with scarcely less enthusiasm.

Church Suffrage. How is the Church reacting to this drive? One of the most interesting reflexes is the tremendous interest which the laymen of the Church have taken in the movement. In this detail, the diocese of New York, has set the pace for the rest of the nation, and there one of the first fruits of the reawakening is a movement which has been inaugurated with great promise of success to admit women to active participation in church affairs, even to the extent of making them members of church vestries and delegates to the diocesan and general conventions.

Samuel Mather

Along the same lines, the activities of the laymen have met with such encouragement from the clergy as to lend color to the belief that in the future former restrictions are to be lifted and the laity are to enjoy participation in the spiritual work of the church which hitherto has been denied them.

Aside from this, the noteworthy and significant fact which the National-Wide Campaign has developed, is a progressive spirit on the part of all classes of the Church, but especially in the hitherto conservative element which is taking the form of an insistence that the Church cannot avoid playing a prominent part in coping with the conditions of economic unrest and disquiet under which the nation is laboring, and that any reconstruction program adopted by the general convention must include consideration of the problem of capital and labor.

Rev. Robert W. Patton, D.D.

Efficient Religion. In New York, for illustration, William Merchants' Association, and Chairman of the Every Name Campaign Committee, declaring "practical, efficient religion," laid it down as a recognized fact, in an interview instituting the religious movement which he heads, "that men and women alike are entitled to safe and healthful surroundings in their employment, to fair working hours and a wage justly proportioned to the profits derived from their labor, adequate recreation, proper housing and stimulating and uplifting amusements," and until these conditions are met, he declared "it is hardly worth while looking for any spiritual reaction among the workers. The efficient religion, he said, is one which ministers to man's material as well as his spiritual needs."

Former Attorney General Wickersham, of Mr. Taft's Cabinet, made a like declaration in support of the Every Name Campaign, and William C. Breed, another well known lawyer, asserted that "the developing tendency of business and professional men to regard religion as an essential feature of every day life not at all incompatible with work-day affairs, is one of the reflexes of the world war to which the Church as an organized institution for human betterment does well to give serious attention." He, too, declared for a practical church in which the new spirit of democracy predominated.

Bishop Charles Sumner Burch

Bishop Williams, of Detroit, declares for the democratization of industry in America, in urging forward the Nation-Wide Campaign of his Church. George B. Elliott, Vice President of the Atlantic Coast Line Railroad, declaring that our civilization has failed, adds, "We must awaken the Church by this campaign. The opportunity and the responsibility are here."

Bishop Burleson, of South Dakota, declares that the "Church faces at this moment her greatest opportunity." The Rev. Dr. Edward L. Parsons, of Berkeley, Cal., says: "Great tasks call for great efforts. Never has Christianity had a greater task than today." The Rev. Dr. Arthur B. Kinsolving, of Baltimore, adds: "The Church today faces in the new age greater duties than ever."

George Zabriskie

York, Charles Sumner Burch, in speeding the campaign on its way, declares that "in common with other communions the Episcopal Church feels the urge of the spirit of the time which compels their active participation in the solution of problems arising out of the world war."

Bishop Burch, of Buffalo, who was the senior Chaplain of the American Expeditionary Force in France, sounds this warning, in urging forward the campaign: "The world is expecting an era of liberty in which justice, honor and freedom, for which the war was fought, will be applied to every department and phase of life and made available for the least man not less than the least nation. If immediate steps are not taken to this end, the disorder which will ensue will be justifiable disorder."

From practically every diocese throughout the nation come similar expressions of the supreme duty of the Church in the new age which has dawned. It is the declared purpose of the Nation-Wide and the Every Name Campaigns to meet these issues and answer the questions which they evoke, answers which bear heavily upon the future of the nation.
