LEGION MEETING IN PORTLAND BIG SUCCESS IS VIEW

The Salem delegates at the state convention of the American Legion held recently in Portland, returned more convinced than ever as to the potentialities of the organization, especially in the creating of the fraternal spirit among all classes of veterans.

They found Lieut. Colonel Roosevelt "the son of his dad" in his sincere, straightforward manner and his bubbling good humor. As the "fighting son of a fighting father" the massed audience gave him an ovation such as rarely accorded to any man of his years.

Among the list of resolutions passed, the Legion went on record for legislation absolutely prohibiting further immigration for the period of two years. They also voiced condemnation of the agitation in labor circles for a general strike in October. They approved the recommendation of a Portland paper that publication of newspapers in foreign languages should only be permitted where the matter is printed in parallel columns with an English version. Another resolution favored the payment of a lump sum to the beneficiaries under the soldiers' pension act, instead of the plan of monthly payments. The meeting endorsed legislation providing prior rights for ex-service men in filling lands in the grant of the Oregon & California railroad. The matter of cash bonuses and gratuities to returned soldiers was hotly discussed, but was finally laid on the table without action.

Astoria was finally selected as the meeting place of the convention of the Legion in 1920. W. B. Follet, of Eugene, was elected to head the organization for the coming year, and E. J. Eivers of Portland, was made secretary.

Each congressional district received five men on the state executive committee. The results were:

First district—Carl E. Wimberley, Roseburg; G. E. Riggs, Albany; Miller E. McGilchrist, Salem; J. Williams, Eugene, and George A. Gore, St. Helens.

Second district—G. R. Wilbur, The Dalles; Carl N. Miller, Enterprise; S. Burke Mussey, The Dalles; C. W. Erskine, Bend; Asa W. Battles, Prineville.

Third district—Thomas Sweeney, Portland; Creed C. Hammond, Portland; C. G. Schneider, Gresham; William C. Kavanaugh, Portland; Wilbur Henderson, Portland.

ADITORIAL

During the late war with Germany we were given opportunity to learn many lessons,—some we did learn,—but alas, others were quickly forgotten.

We were shown that Americanism started first with the individual, extending to the family and through the family to the community. It was the communities that made up the big whallops that put an end to Kaiserism.

Loyalty to the Flag found its first expression in loyalty to one's own home and community. How many today are remembering that lesson of real Americanism and practicing it, in TRY YOUR OWN TOWN FIRST.

The greatest slogan of the war,—the one that expressed the real spirit of an American and pointed the road to duty in times of peace—was this:

"COMMUNITY INTEREST IS THE BASIS OF AMERICAN LIBERTY."

Think it over—are you living for American liberty,—or are you following strange gods, making your living here in Salem and then spending it elsewhere?

During a war when one does not play the game square and stand 100 per cent American, they are branded as a "pro," aye, the military term is "traitor."—Salem has no room for such. This is our town, the best on the map—let's build it, you and I, by SPENDING OUR MONEY at home.

Oregon Newspapers And Banks To Co-Operate In Aid For Storm Victims

The newspapers and banks of Oregon will co-operate with the governor's committee in the campaign for funds for the relief of the storm stricken people of Corpus Christi, Texas. This information contained in a telegram from Mayor Baker of Portland, to Governor O'cott was in turn submitted by the governor to Governor Hobby of Texas with a request for further details as to the need in the stricken area. The newspapers will carry the appeal for aid and the banks will collect the funds which will be turned over to the Portland chapter of the Red Cross for transmission to Texas.

Extension School Wants To Know Its Status Under Provisions Of Aid Bill

J. C. Almack of the University of Oregon extension department, was a state capital visitor Thursday, in consultation with Attorney General Brown relative to the effect of the soldiers' educational aid bill on the extension classes which the university is conducting in Portland. Many returned service men are desirous of taking advantage of the act in order to attend the classes in Portland, according to Mr. Almack. Attorney General Brown has taken the matter under advisement.

WHITE SOX CHOICE OF NEW YORK FANS

New York, Sept. 19.—(United Press)—New York favors Kid Gleason's entries in the October classic.

What little betting is being done around here makes the White Sox a 7 to 5 favorite over the Reds.

In spite of the common punch that the Reds gained by the nine game decision, the bugs who saw the White Sox in action against the Yankees believe the Chicago clan can go any distance and nose out Moran's pets. The work of the diminutive southpaw, Dick Kerr, swung many fans from the belief that Gleason had only a two pitcher team and up to this time the main doubt of the White Sox supporters has been in the possibility of Cicotte and Williams carrying the whole load in the series.

Much is taken also from comparison of the two teams in the last ten days. The hitting of the Reds has slumped badly and on their own grounds the team has been playing far off the form that has characterized their work all season. Gleason, on the other hand, hasn't allowed his machine to slacken a bit.
