More Heat On Morning O. E. Train Is Assured Public
Hereafter there will be sufficient heat in the Oregon Electric train which leaves Salem at 7:15 a. m., Portland bound. Prompted by numerous complaints from passengers who patronize the early morning train, Chairman Buchtel took the matter up with the railroad administration, calling attention to the fact that many school children were patrons of this train and the lack of sufficient heat was a menace to their health. In a letter from A. J. Davidson of Portland, federal manager of the S. P. & S., today, Chairman

Complaints of the condition of the streetcar track is in on South Winter street between State and Oak have been pouring in on City Recorder Race for several days. Persons who travel this line several times a day say that it is a hardship to have to ride over this strip of the road, the uneven roadbed causing the car to jar and lurch violently at times.

Recorder Race took the matter up with Acting Superintendent Smith, of the Salem Street Railway company Wednesday. Mr. Smith said that they were aware of the condition of the track, and said that as soon as estimates of costs of repair, which are now being compiled by the company officials, are completed, work on the stretch will begin.

Billingsly Is Reported Slightly Better Today
The condition of Superintendent T. G. Billingsly, of the Salem Street Railway company, who was injured in the collision with a Southern Pacific train Monday morning, was reported from the Salem hospital at noon today as "some better." He slept well up to midnight, attacks said, but after that became restless. No apprehension as to his recovery, or a sudden change for the worse is felt yet, although it is said that a change is quite possible.
