AUTO MAKERS LOOK FOR MORE POWERFUL GASOLINE FOR CARS

Automobile manufacturers are lookin toward the adjustment of their engine to the less volutile but more powerfy gasoline now being supplied by petro leum refiners. Refiners, in order meet the increasing demands upon petro-leum stock, have cut deeper into the erude oil and are producing a fuel con siderably more powerful than that of former years. The problem of engine adoption to the supply of petroleum and its refined parts is one expected to combefore the statistical research bureau which the American Petroleum institute, with hendquarters in New York, in tends to establish. In this institute pro ducers, refiners and consumers of oi may join in co-ordinating their effort for the improvement of the industry.

Dr. Van H, Manning, director of the United States bureau of mines, is also chairman of the improvement committee of the institute. He has recommend ed to the institute directorate that the new hurean be established with an apprepriation of $1,000,000 a year to be raised on a production basis from refiners and producers. A special commit tee to consider this recommendation has been appointed by President Thomas A O Danell. A favorable report on the Manning proposal is expected by indi vidual inclubers of the institute.

The problem of using a less volatile but more powerful gasoline for automo biles is not a new one. Anccording to Henry L. Doherty, chairman of a com nitte of petroleum producers and refiners which is now negotiating with the manufacturers of motors, Doherty's committee and another headed by John Willys, of the automobile manufactturers, have had the problem under con sideration for some time. Although pe troleum producers are bending every possible effort toward increased prod-ticu they have thus far been unable to adequately cope with the enormous in crease in the demand for petroleum produsts, especially gasoline. Refiners, however, have advanced the only practical solution to the threatened short the by cutting deeper into the crude or and extracting a greater volume of gaso-line which is less volatile but more pow-In this way it is hoped the supply of this fuel can in some measure keep page with the demand.

It is significant to note the spirit of cooperation between etroleum producers refiners and automotive enginers. satisfactory solution of the future of the gasoline problem is expected and one which will not cause automobile owners to suffer serious loss in the of their engines to the more powerful fuel.
